After Labor Day
The Big Question Mark
Plenty for 100,000?
Or Enough for 1,000,000?

— By Arthur Brisbane —

LABOR DAY has gone. The problem of unemployed labor remains.

What is to be done? A being from another planet might find the problem simple.

It comes to this: "How can you take care of idle, hungry men in a land with unlimited supplies of food, plus unlimited supplies of money?"

Nearly five hundred millions to be spent on buildings by the national government are expected to provide jobs for 100,000 men. Good news for the building trades.

But 100,000 jobs in one set of trades mean little in a problem involving six to eight millions unemployed. Something else is needed to take care of what Mr. Woll, of the American Federation of Labor, calls "the coming winter that will test our faith in each other," and to avoid "lawlessness most widespread in the nation's history," predicted by Clarence Darrow. "Jobs are the workers' prosperity," says Mr. Woll.

Eggs are the poultryman's prosperity, but suppose the hens do not lay. This seems to be industry's moulting season. Mr. Woll says "those who control work opportunities should contribute jobs."

Industry cannot contribute jobs if it cannot sell what the jobs produce. The payroll of this nation is sixty billion dollars a year. You cannot produce that like a rabbit from a magician's hat.

Mr. Woll eloquently denounces "the paradox of starvation beside the heaps of plenty."

A government wondering what to do with 200,000,000 bushels of hoarded wheat while families are hungry, presents a sad spectacle.

There is abundance of food, and plenty of money. The government has credit almost inexhaustible.

But supplying money only for a building and road-construction will solve no problem.

Everybody expresses a solemn horror of the dole, that according to Dr. Butler "would turn us into a nation of self-made beggars."

Then, what is to be done?

If you cannot give a hungry family money to buy food, horrible as that suggestion seems, what will you do?

Will you advise the white collar man, his wife and children to learn brick-laying and work on a postoffice job?

If they learned, the union would not let them work.

Five hundred million dollars in building jobs will supply good wages for 100,000 men and a decent living for their 100,000 families.

Five hundred million dollars given directly to those in need, without deduction of profit for contractors, materials, etc., would supply $500 a year, the living minimum, to ONE MILLION men, and their 1,000,000 families.

On the other hand, five hundred millions spent for construction would help business and industry, and contribute to prosperity's return.

It might be said that giving $500 to each of 1,000,000 families, enabling them to buy, would also help prosperity.

Opponents of the dole say: "No, the American worker does not want charity, he wants a job."

There is a good ring to that, but what is the difference between charity and a job artificially created, for charity's sake.

When you create jobs you declare that men willing to work are entitled to a living. That to which a man is ENTITLED is not charity.

Shall the government's five hundred millions be used to provide for 100,000, or for 1,000,000 idle men and their families, thus helping the industry and prosperity's return? Or shall five billions, which would be nearer the mark, be used to maintain 1,000,000 or 10,000,000 of the unemployed and their families? Do you wish to placate the unemployed by employing a chosen few, principally at skilled labor, or to provide a bare sufficiency for all in an international calamity?

Five BILLIONS is probably the necessary minimum for this emergency. Our government found double that amount to help Europe, engaged in the noble task of cutting throats. The prosaic task of helping our own people to fill their stomachs seems to lack the charm possessed by hungry Belgians, or borrowing Britons.

POLICE BOARD CONVICTS 'FIXER'

WOMAN TELLS 'FRAMEUP' CHARGE

Mrs. Fellowes Describes to Trial Board of Attempt Made to Trap Her

BULLETIN

In a sealed recommendation to Commissioner Hultman this afternoon, the police trial board considering the case of Patrolman Stephen J. Westhoff recommended 105 hours punishment duty for his alleged attempt to "fix" charges against two policemen accused of attacking Mrs. Evangeline "Sally" Fellowes.

Mrs. Evangeline "Sally" Fellowes, young blonde wife, who charged two Boston policemen with attacking her, today related to a police trial board her version of her latest troubles—an alleged attempt to "frame" her by a man who, police say, offered to trap her in a Boston hotel.

Mrs. Fellowes, appearing before three police captains against Patrolman Stephen J. Westhoff, charged with attempting to "fix" the attack case she brought against the two officers, told of her encounter with a man Rhode Island police say is Edward Schwartz, 30, of Middletown, R. I.

Her story checked with that of Rhode Island State troopers, who said that, in answer to a telephone call from a man name "Schwartz," they had found a young woman believed to be Mrs. Fellowes in his car parked near the Hope Valley barracks of the State police.

"I was looking for work in restaurants along Tremont st.," the pretty young mother said. "I noticed a blue roadster pulling up to the curb, and a man I didn't know got out and spoke to me.

OFFERED TO HELP

"He said: 'I've seen your picture in the papers, and I know all about you troubles. I can take you to a man who will give you a job, and will give you money to press your case against these policemen.'

"I got into the car and he drove toward Providence, telling me he ways taking me to see the man he spoke of.

"Once he got out and made a phone call. Between 9 and 10 o'clock he stopped the car along the road, and soon after two state policemen approached the car.

"The man, who told me to call

'BLUEBEARD' PUTS WIFE IN TERROR

Mrs. Powers and Sister Now in Fear of Man They Once Thought "So Nice"

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 8—Harry Powers, Chevrolet salesman, on this day he was arrested for the murders of two widows and three children, used his wife and her sister to transfer funds from his own bank account to their accounts, and he told them to "Keep your mouths shut."

This was admitted to the police today by Mrs. "Liz" Powers and her sister, Eva Strother. They said that on August 27 Powers, in the county jail, wrote a check for $3,657.63, which they deposited to their own account.

Meanwhile, a suit was filed in circuit court charging that Powers defrauded Mrs. Dorothy Lemke, his fifth victim, of $15,000 and that Mrs. Powers and Miss Strother were aware of the fraud.

PUT MONEY IN BANK

For the sixth time, Chief Duckworth and Detective Southern went to the home of the wife and sister to question the women.

Miss Strother was taken to the local bank where she showed the bankbook deposit notation of the check for $3657 which she endorsed after Powers had given it to her. She was then taken back to be questioned with Mrs. Powers again at their home.

At the home, an important discovery was made which will strengthen the case against Powers and cannot be divulged until the trial.

"Didn't you know that by accepting the check and depositing it without letting authorities

3 CHILDREN DIE IN FLAMES

Northboro, Sept. 8—Three small children burned to death today in their home in Bartlett st., while their mother, Mrs. Mary Ouimet, tried desperately to save them, battling neighbors who prevented her from plunging into the flames to rescue them.

The mother saved two other children. One of these, Louis, five, is under treatment in Marlboro Hospital. She dropped the boy from a second floor window and then leaped herself.

"The dead children are Irene, four; Louella, three, and Paul, two. The house was destroyed.

Irene's body was found with her arms wrapped around her baby brother, Paul, as if trying to shield him from the flames. The body of Louella was found under a crib.

The mother is under a doctor's care in the home of a neighbor.

Her husband had got up, lighted the stove and gone out to do some chores. She was feeding the baby, Alfonse, six months old, in the dining room, and the other four children were in bed upstairs.

When the stove exploded, she put the baby down and rushed into the kitchen to find it a mass of flames. She turned back and carried out the baby and then returned and dashed upstairs.

The flames had spread rapidly, swirling up the staircase, and when she had lifted Louis out of bed, her exit was barred by a sheet of fire. She dropped him from the window and jumped herself.

STEWART BODY RECOVERED

Investigation of the death of George E. Stewart, who went overboard from the yacht Gray Goose in Hingham bay on a midnight cruise a week ago, was accelerated today by the finding of his body by Hull police off Newport ave., Waveland.

Commissioner of Public Safety Henry J. Stevens hurried at once to Hull to reopen his inquiry. A split between Stevens and Chief of Police Reynolds of Hull followed Reynolds' declaration that Stewart was accidentally drowned.

Stewart, with Robert Arabian and Capt. Russell Dennen, took the yacht on a cruise without permission of the owner, Harry H. Turner of Boston and Brookline. Police say that at Nantasket two women were taken aboard.

Next day Stewart was missing and Dennen said he had fallen overboard.

Live Wire Snaps, Tying Up Subway

Subway service in the Boylston st. tube was blocked for half an hour today when a live wire snapped in the tunnel under the Muddy river, between Copley and Kenmore stations.

While emergency crews worked on the break, buses were put into operation between the two stations and inbound and outbound cars were turned back.

5-DAY WEEK IS URGED BY CURLEY TO BALK DOLE

Mayor Says the Entire Nation Must Adopt the Plan to Escape Business Depression

Not only Boston, but the entire United States, both government and industry, must adopt the five-day week or face the only alternative—the dole—Mayor Curley said today.

He described it as the only cure for unemployment, in elaborating upon his plan, announced yesterday, for Boston to lead the way for a five-day week in civic government.

Within three years—within five at the utmost—the five-day week will be generally accepted in America, he said.

PROVIDE MORE JOBS

He discussed some details of the plan today with Corp. Counsel Silverman, Budget Commissioner Fox and Auditor Carven. Commissioner Fox, he said, had been at work on the plan for eight months.

No new legislation is necessary to make the plan legal, he said.

The number of additional persons for whom employment would be provided by spreading six days of work into five, has not yet been determined and he would not approximate it.

Compensatory time off, instead of overtime pay, will probably be one of the features of the plan.

ON YEARLY WAGE

Another may be the placing of city laborers, some 4000 in number, on annual salary instead of day wages now paid.

In commenting upon unemployment in general, he said that industry must curtail the speed-up system. A 5-day week in all industry would absorb the 3,000,000 unemployed who really want work, he said.

Not only must the working days be curtailed but, eventually, the working hours if the nation is to meet the emergency.

"In Boston, as in effecting our city workers, the working out of details will probably require about 60 days," he said.

"For that reason I cannot com-

POLICE FIGURES SHOW INCREASE IN CRIME HERE

JUMP SHOWN IN MURDERS, ROBBERIES

Report Prepared for Mayor Bares 10 Per Cent Gain in Major Offenses

Mayor Curley failed to get his expected crime figures today from Police Commr. Hultman, but the Boston Evening American learned, nevertheless, that the figures, when given to the mayor, will show a crime increase of about 10 per cent.

The figures, which are not quite in readiness for Mayor Curley but will be tomorrow or Thursday are a survey of crime during the last 12 months, ending Aug. 31, as compared with the previous 12-month period ending Aug. 31, 1930.

There was a distinct air of reticence in Commissioner Hultman's office when reporters asked for the compilation, and no one would discuss the figures.

LIST MAJOR CRIMES.

It was learned, however, that the only figures the police head is giving the Mayor are on murder, manslaughter, breaking and entering and robbery, while armed or unarmed.

The commissioner's list of crimes will not include drunkenness, liquor law violations, automobile thefts, driving while under the influence of liquor, crimes against morality or any of the rest in the long list of designations.

However, his list will include information that between 70 and 80 police officers went on trial before boards of captains during the 13-month period.

In the last police report, contrasted in the police annual, murder cases jumped 30 per cent, from 12 in 1929 to 18 in 1930; manslaughter jumped 13 per cent, or from 83 to 96; robbery was up 24 per cent, from 174 to 217; assault cases jumped from 121 to 137 and burglary took a big jump, from 394 to 502.

HOW FIGURES COMPARE.

The police year is from November 30 to the following November 30, and the figures from the 1930 ending of the fiscal year, as compared with the 1929 fiscal year, read:

	1929	1930
Murder	12	18
Manslaughter	83	96
Rape	42	76
Robbery	174	217
Aggravated assault	121	137
Burglary	394	502
Automobile thefts	332	306
Larceny	2,336	2,423
Liquor violations	3,943	4,021
Drunkenness	33,911	33,764
Operating under influence	659	570
Operating under influence (3d offense)	48	36

DROP IN ARRESTS

The total of arrests for the year ending last Nov. 30, as given in the annual report, were 42,004, as against 42,166 for the preceding police year.

When the Mayor gets his report, it will show a jump of approximately 10 per cent above the 1930 figures.

SCHWARTZ AND TWO ACCUSED

Contempt of court charges were filed today in Superior Court against Atty. Leo Schwartz, legal adviser of Police Commissioner Hultman, and against Capt. William H. Gowell, police property clerk, and Patrolman Harry M. Durkin of Roxbury Crossing station.

The action was taken by Atty. Sylvester Kaufman of Devonshire in a case growing out of the arrest of George Fennuchi of Roxbury and seizure of his automobile in connection with an alleged liquor law violation.

In Superior Court, Fennuchi was found not guilty and the court ordered his car returned. Atty. Schwartz is alleged to have advised the police officers not to return the car.

Too Much Cheating in Sing Sing Game

Ossining, N. Y., Sept. 8 (INS)—The annual Labor Day tug-of-war at Sing Sing prison was ruled no contest today "because of cheating."

Shortly after a team of 12 white men and 12 negroes began tugging, it was discovered that there were 18 men in the white crew and 17 on the colored side.

The referee said every few minutes each team had augmented its ranks as new men slipped into line from the crowd of spectators.

VICTORS IN AIR RACES SHARE THOUSANDS

Springfield Fliers Are Among Big Winners; Seek New Honors at Meet Today

Cleveland, Sept. 8—The sport of air racing has material return as well as its thrills. Here is how some of the leading money winners of the 1931 national races fared in the ten-day meeting:

Maj. James H. Doolittle, $10,000.

Lowell Bayles, Springfield, Mass., $8500.

Mrs. Mae Hizlip, St. Louis, $7150.

W. J. Wedell, Patterson, La., $3500.

Mrs. Phoebe Omlie, Memphis, Tenn., $4250 and an automobile worth $2500.

John Livingsto, Aurora, Ill., $6280.

Harold S. Johnson, Chicago, $4500.

Miss Florence Klingens m i t h, Minneapolis, $4300.

Maud Irving Tait, Springfield, Mass., $4250.

Robert Hall, Springfield, Mass., $3150.

D. C. Warren, San Francisco; Reuter Blevins, Atlanta; Gladys O'Donnell, Long Beach, Cal.; Dale Jackson, St. Louis, $3000.

Ray Moore, San Francisco, $2350.

James Haizlop, St. Louis, $1860.

Value of many of the trophies swell the winnings of the various pilots. Livingston carried home six trophies.

WEMYSS, KIDNAP VICTIM, HAS COLLAPSE

Strain of Experience and Its Aftermaths Too Much for Him, Doctor Declares

The strain of his declared kidnaping and subsequent investigation by detectives of two States brought collaps etoday to George Wemyss of Hough's Neck—and he was under his doctor's care.

"His nerves have given way," Dr. Richard Ash of Quincy told all callers. "He needs rest and quiet."

Wemyss' collapse came as detectives were concentrating their investigations on a report that, shortly aftr Wemyss entered the water at L st. on the afternoon he said he was kidnaped, a motorboat pulled anchor off the swimming resort and drifted shoreward.

The identity of the motorboat or men is not known either by the police or by private investigators checking Wemyss' startling story of his alleged kidnaping.

A bather at L street that day is understood to have furnished detectives with this information.

Boston police inspectors working on the strange case are still open-minded as far as Wemyss' story is concerned. South Boston police and superiors, as well as the guards assigned to the L street resort, however, scoff at the story.

Greek Premier "All Wet" Actually Wrings His Beard

Geneva, Sept. 8—A pitcher of water, accidentally tipped over upon him while he was arguing on the merits of Bulgarian war debts, failed to dampen the eloquence of Eluftherios Venizelos, premier of Greece, although the venerable statesman was considerably drenched at the League of Nations session here.

A girl stenographer was the unwitting perpetrator of the accident, which might have been a cause for much ado by a person less gallant than the premier.

M. Venizelos continued his talk while wringing out his beard in matter-of-fact fashion, relieving the stenographer of considerable embarrassment and saved the day by acting as though nothing had happened.

him Larry, held out his hands and the officers handcuffed him. They took us to the barracks, and after I told my story, they told me about the phone call to the barracks and let us go."

PROPOSED TRAP

Police of the Hope Valley barracks, together with Capt. Harry Grace, confirmed the story that a call over the telephone had offered to "frame" Mrs. Fellowes.

Capt. Grace said the man proposed to take her to a Boston hotel, where police could arrest them on serious charges. Capt. Grace said he refused the offer.

Meanwhile, police of two states were delving into the apparent legal immunity that surrounds Schwartz, who has been the central figure in many court cases, but has no convictions to his record.

In 1926 he appeared twice in Fall River courts to face serious charges preferred by May King, 21, of Westport. While with Schwartz it was alleged the King girl fell from a window and was seriously injured.

He was discharged on an assault warrant. A second assault charge, which went to the Superior Court, was nole prossed.

Later he was arrested and discharged on a reckless driving count. On a charge of assault and battery he was fined $30 and appealed. No record has been found of the disposition of the case, police say.

Schwartz is said by police to be manager of a shoe store in Main st., Fall River.

The young wife and mother, wrung with emotion, also repeated to Capts. Livingston, Dickinson and McKinnin her story of the night on which she says Kinsman and Daly attacked her in a lonely quarry in Roslindale.

Judge John Perrins refused to issue warrants for the two policemen after Mrs. Fellowes' charges had brought a sweeping probe in the personnel of station 18, where the men are attached.

During her recital, Westhoff sat silently and listened to her draw a verbal picture of him as a "fixer," who sought to influence her action against her alleged attackers.

Later, under questioning by Louis Feinstein, Mrs. Fellowes' attorney, he denied attempting to quiet the charges.

ADMITS SEEKING HER

"Yes," he admitted, "I went to Mrs. Fellowes to talk about the case. But when she told me her story, I said that if those fellows had done what she accused them of, I would have nothing to do with the case, and that they should get what they deserved."

Following her testimony, Mrs. Fellowes and her attorney left the hearing.

But, as he left, Feinstein had one parting shot for Davy and Kinsman.

"I have already talked to the district-attorney," he declared, and we are trying to induce him to let us place the facts in the case against Davy and Kinsman before the grand jury. We are determined to bring them to justice."

O. McIntyre and George O. Lee, Florida newspaperman, as codefendants, to appear in circuit court.

Lea had previously deeded a one-hundredth interest in a farm to each of the persons named.

BUTLER BARRED BY DISPUTES

Washington, Sept. 8 (INS)—Reports from Boston that ex-Senator William M. Butler of Massachusetts has been asked by Hoover leaders to conduct the next campaign as chairman of the Republican National committee were discredited here today.

No consideration has been given the matter, it was stated at the White House on behalf of the President.

Butler was chairman of the committee in 1924 and conducted the campaign which elected Calvin Coolidge. He had so many differences with party leaders in that campaign that observers here do not believe that he will be selected to manage the 1932 campaign.

It headed for Sydney, N. S., where it was due at 5:40 tonight, and was expected to continue down the coast to Boston and to New York, where the Europa is due Thursday night.

The North German Lloyd liner was approximately 1500 miles from New York when the plane Bremen was launched for the first mid-ocean ship-to-shore mail service ever attempted.

Whether the plane would pause at Sydney to refuel and continue on to Boston Airport tonight was not made clear in radio advices from the Europa to North German Lloyd officials.

Its pilot is Herr Blankenburg and its radio operator Herr Kirchhoff.

Colorado Springs, Sept. 8 (INS)—Pike's Peak was humiliated today because Charles Myers had climbed its steep 12¾ miles course in 17 minutes, 10 seconds, setting a new record.

SHIFT FATAL

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 8 (INS)—J. S. Hale, of Alabama, was killed when a heavy metal load in a freight car in which he was stealing a ride shifted and crushed him.

4 MACHINES IN CRASH; 3 HURT

Three sisters were injured, one seriously, today when three autos and a truck collided in Beacon st., Newton, near Hammonswood rd.

The sisters, who were riding with Frederick C. Maier of Cavanaugh rd., Wellesley, were taken to Newton hospital. Miss May V. R. Draper, 33, of Tyler st., Newton Center, suffered a scalp wound and possible fracture of the skull. Miss Bessie D. Draper, 38, received a lacerated forehead, and Miss Ruth Draper, 30, cuts on the face.

Police said the accident occurred when a car driven by Carl W. Heller of Oxford rd., Newton Center, crashed into the rear of a truck operated by Frank A. Crowl of Empire st., Allston.

Heller then carromed off the truck, and collided with that driven by Charles G. Norton of Pleasant st., Newton Center, and the Maier car.

OLDER PEOPLE ON INCREASE

Washington, Sept. 8 (AP)—Fewer youngsters and more old people were shown by the Census Bureau today to be in the United States than were counted a decade ago, although 47,608,991 children 19 or under formed 38.8 per cent of the total population.

Persons between 25 and 44 were described as in the most productive period of life. Between these limits were found in 1930, 36,152,869, divided into 32.8 per cent of the urban population, 25.9 per cent of the rural dwellers, and 27.8 per cent of the rural non-farm or village districts.

Of the nation's 122,775,046 people, 22.9 per cent were found in the 28,142,808 listed from 45 upward, and 8.8 per cent, were accounted for in the 10,870,378 between 20 and 24 years old. Under the heading "21 or over," the bureau put 72,943,624, as compared with 60,886,520 in 1920.

The percentage of children was reported to be highest in the rural districts, but the decline was as marked in the farming areas as in the cities.

Many Priests Attend O'Leary Observance

Springfield, Sept. 8 (AP)—Nearly 300 priests and many sisters of religious orders today attended ceremonies that marked the tenth anniversary of the consecration of the Rt. Rev. Thomas M. O'Leary as Roman Catholic bishop of Springfield diocese.

In St. Michael's Cathedral the bishop officiated at pontifical high mass. Luncheon followed at the College of Our Lady of the Elms in Chicopee.

Henry V. Neal, 85, of Everett, Is Dead

Henry V. Neal, 85, for many years a Boston Elevated machinist and inventor, died today at his home, 12 Foster st., Everett. In 1915 he was awarded the Brady medal for notable inventions. In his leisure time he wrote songs and poetry.

A son, J. Henry Neal, of Cambridge, former president of the Boston Elevated, and a daughter, Mrs. Florence Colcord, of Everett, survive him.

NEW HAVEN HEADS CUT OWN SALARIES

New York, Sept. 8—Announcement was made today that directors of the New Haven had voted to cut their fees one half, and that the higher officers of the company have voluntarily reduced their salaries 10 per cent.

It was stated the $1 dividend, designated as a quarterly payment, places the stock on a $4 annual basis, and is payable Oct. 1 to stockholders of record Sept. 18.

Girl Says She Was Hurled From Car

Catherine A. Mulloy, 27, who gave her address as Dartmouth st., Back Bay, was arrested on a drunkenness charge last night in Malden. She told police she had been hurled from an auto on the Newburyport turnpike, exhibiting a black eye and other injuries.

University Aid Pledged

Los Angeles, Sept. 8 (AP)—Aid in the campaign to raise $1,000,000 for the Catholic University in Washington, D. C., was pledged at a conference of Western prelates of the church here last night.

POLICE CHIEF IS SHOT DEAD

Bernardsville, N. J., Sept. 8 (AP)—Chief of Police Charles Cavanaugh was shot and killed outside the door of his home early today by an unidentified assailant.

Cavanaugh had run out of his home to help fight a fire in a house across the street. He was with a group of other persons when the bullet, apparently fired from around a corner of his own house, dropped him.

He was instantly killed and fell at the feet of his young wife, mother of an infant child.

Driver Escapes as Truck Skids, Upsets

Henry McLaren, 22, of High st., Westwood driver, escaped with slight injuries today, when a truck conveying crushed stone skidded and turned turtle in Needham. He was taken to the Leonard Morse Hospital.

KING SAYS HE AND MARY CAN SQUEEZE BY ON $7000 A DAY

Ryan Spots 'Crazy' Drivers; 100 Will Go on Mat

EACH ONE WILL EXPLAIN WHY HE CUTS OUT

Registrar in Person Watches Cars Along the Groton and Ayer Routes

Motor Vehicle Registrar Ryan went motoring over Labor Day week end—and as a result approximately 100 motorists will be called before him to explain their methods of driving.

As a result of his tour, the registrar plans to establish a system of holiday highway patrol, and will inaugurate it on the Columbus Day double holiday week-end, he said.

Motorists, particularly in the vicinity of Groton and Ayer, and along the Newburyport turnpike, are the ones upon whom the wrath of the motor vehicle director has fallen.

DRIVING LIKE LUNATICS

"I am disappointed to see people so inattentive," said the registrar today. "Yesterday they were cutting out of line like lunatics.

"I know this not from hearsay or guess work, because my associates, Mr. Bonzagni and Mr. Devine, spent a large portion of yesterday on the roads, especially the Newburyport turnpike.

"I was in the vicinity of Groton and Ayer. This is part of our new program to look around on the roads and see how people are driving, although we do not stop them except in flagrant cases.

'GET THERE FIRST' SPIRIT

"I watched motorists yesterday and, with those noted by Mr. Bonzagni and Mr. Devine, some 100 will be summoned to the registry to explain what their object was in such a rush and why they took such terrible chances.

"In addition, we are, of course, thoroughly investigating the accident cases and have automatically, as required by law, suspended the license of drivers in fatal accident cases.

"I don't think the trouble is drunken driving. It is the old Roman holiday spirit a-ttrying to beat the other fellow at any cost."

WANTED LOVE AND RICHES, TOO

This is the letter written to the American Friendship Society in Detroit by Mrs. Laura Brucklemeyer, asking the address of "Ralph." The man proved to be Martin Downey, who represented himself as a wealthy real estate man.

VICTIM OF TRAGEDY

Mrs. Laura B. Downey, who later married Downey. He was a pauper and he killed her and took his own life.

THREE DAUGHTERS WERE SPARED

Here are Edure, Ruth and Eleanor Brucklemeyer, the daughters of Mrs. Laura Brucklemeyer Downey, who were made motherless when Mrs. Downey was killed by her mail order husband. Downey had not made a study of "synthetic love."

THREE GIRLS ESCAPE THIS BLUEBEARD

WALES, HIT BY DEPRESSION, DOES HIS BIT

Keeper of the Privy Purse Told Royal Family Must Get Along on $2,445,000

London, Sept. 8 — King George's offer to dip into his income for a quarter of a million dollars in order to help tide John Bull over his financial embarrassment made a favorable impression today on members of Parliament gathered for the first special session since the war.

King George has a "salary" of $2,700,000 a year in round figures. By cutting a quarter million off he will still take out about $2,450,000 a year. In other words, he and Queen Mary are going to scrimp along on $7000 a day.

The willingness of the Prince of Wales to contribute $50,000 income himself to lighten the load of the new national government and that of other members of the Royal family to help in accordance with their means were no less well received.

The King, acting through the keeper of the privy purse, wrote Prime Minister MacDonald that in view of the grave financial situation confronting the nation he "desired personally to participate in the movement for reduction of national expenditure."

WHOLE ROYAL FAMILY HIT

King George said he was of the opinion that "by the exercise of the most rigid economy it should be possible to reduce the civil list by £50,000.

"I am glad to say that the Queen and other members of the royal family who are in receipt of parliamentary grants are all desirous that reductions of these grants should be made during this time of national crisis."

The maintenance of the crown is provided by a civil list totaling about $2,350,000 annually, theoretically granted by Parliament each year. In addition to the King derives a fluctuating revenue from the Duchy of Lancaster, which, for example, netted $245,000 in 1929. From these funds he pays he must defray the expenses of state ceremonials, the palaces, pensions, servants, charities and the Queen's court.

The Prince of Wales is not included in the civil list and his only income accrues from the Duchy of Cornwall, which in 1929 brought him $330,000.

TWO AUNTS MUST SCRIMP

Other members of the royal family who draw parliamentary grants aggregating about $530,000 annually are the King's four younger children, his two aunts, the Princess Louise and the Duke of Connaught.

Wholesale merchants and housewives have bought great quantities of commodities in anticipation that the new economy proposals will increase extra taxes on "soft" stuffs, tobacco and spirits. Tea, beer, wine, cigarettes and petrol are being purchased at present levels in expectation of a jump in prices.

Tobacconists foresee that the levy on cigarettes will mount from a half-penny a package to a penny and that on pipe tobacco and cigars will rise proportionately. Tobacco now yields about $305,000,000 in revenue annually.

Import duties are expected to be raised on films, clocks, watches, automobiles, musical instruments and silk.

Ocean Hoppers

DON MOYLE

C. A. ALLEN

Don Moyle and C. A. Allen, California airmen, are heading across the Pacific today in an attempted nonstop flight from Tokio to Seattle, Wash.

OCEAN FLIERS OVER PACIFIC

Tokio, Sept. 8 (AP)—Trying to fly non-stop 4465 miles across the Pacific from Japan to Seattle in a plane which had failed other aviators twice in similar attempts, Don Moyle and C. A. Allen presumably were well on their way today.

They took off from Samushiro Beach, 375 miles north of here, at 4.30 p. m., Boston time yesterday, with 1020 gallons of gasoline and began what is considered perhaps the most hazardous of all ocean flight undertakings.

An hour and ten minutes after the takeoff they were sighted off Point Erimo, Hokkaido Island, 110 miles from Samushiro Beach, having set a 100-mile-an-hour pace for the first stages of their trip. Their route as mapped followed close to the Kurile Island chain, that foggy stretch which gave so much trouble recently to Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh on their flight to Japan.

After they had passed Point Erimo, Japan did not hear from them again.

They carried no radio and their course took them somewhat to the north of the steamship lane. Hence there was little possibility of their being heard from until they approached the American coast.

Moyle calculating the flight would take 38 to 44 hours, depending on the weather. This would land them in Seattle by Wednesday.

Store Teeth Dropped in River Return on Oyster

Baltimore, Sept. 8—An oyster wearing an upper set of false teeth was caught in the Chester river, according to Swepson Earle, state conservation commissioner.

The teeth had been lost a year ago by an oyster tonger.

Earle said young oysters have a weakness for anything solid.

33 BACK FROM TRIPS ABROAD

Thirty-three voyagers living in Boston and other New England cities are returning from Europe on the Columbus of the North German Lloyd Line, due in New York today from Bremen, Southampton and Cherbourg.

Among them are Floyd de Groat, general agent here of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New Jersey; Mrs. de Groat and their daughter, Elizabeth; Mrs. Lucy W. Howes and Margaret Howes of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Willet of Boston, William and Curtis Prout of Boston, Miss Elrene W. Smyth of Cambridge, Miss Louise A. Hannon and Miss Celina H. Leins of Brookline; Miss Kathryn L. O'Brien of Jamaica Plain, Prof. and Mrs. Proctor F. Sherwin of Cambridge, Miss Ruth M. Gow and Miss Mary Goodwin of Norwood, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Grover, Cambridge; Alexander Nainanson, Boston; Richard A. Bloomfield, Boston, and Mrs. Ruth Ruskin and Mrs. Ida Golden, Cambridge.

Terrapin's "Speed" Wins $3500 Race

Ponca City, Okla., Sept. 8 (AP)—Bobblestone hasn't much speed but he is a derby winner. It took him 1 minute 15 seconds to go 75 feet, but that was fast enough to win a terrapin race and $3500 for his owner.

Chinese Dead by Unknown Poison

Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner, today was to perform an autopsy on the body of Yee Foaz Shu, 34, Chinese shopkeeper, found dead early today in a basement near his Hudson ave. shop.

A tentative verdict of death from an unknown poison was given.

NAUTILUS BACK IN SPITZBERGEN

Copenhagen, Sept. 8 (INS)—The polar submarine Nautilus of Sir Hubert Wilkins arrived at Long Year City, Spitzbergen, at 1 o'clock this afternoon, after a perilous cruise in Arctic waters, according to messages received here today.

The reports said the submarine had been considerably damaged since it left Spitzbergen.

On August 21 the Nautilus radioed that she had entered the zone of the ice pack and that she would press on despite an accident.

There were several days of silence, during which men who knew the Arctic felt concern for the safety of the expedition. Rescue vessels were equipped and made ready for a search.

The ship made several dives under the ice, and everybody aboard was as well as could be expected.

SHE'S DEAD, HE'S MISSING

MRS. JOHNSON

Einor G. Johnson, reported to have eloped with a 19-year-old girl, was the object of a widespread search today while funeral arrangements were being made for Mrs. Elsa M. S. Johnson, his wife, who ended her life yesterday.

EINOR G. JOHNSON

BEE IMPERILS LIVES OF FOUR

Newport, R. I., Sept. 8—A busy little bee nearly exterminated John Francis Silva and John Francis Silvia, Jr., and both their wives.

Silvia, the elder, was driving in East Main rd., Portsmouth, when a bee alighted on his nose. That might have been all right, except for the tickle—but then the bee sat down.

The driver lost control of the car and crashed into a telegraph pole, ruining the car and nearly ruining the whole family.

All were treated by a doctor for cuts about the face and head and then sent to Newport Hospital, where the elder Silvia was held.

G. A. R. Vet, 'Dead' for 47 Years, Found

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 8—Believed dead for nearly half a century, Samuel E. Foulkes, veteran of the Civil War, was reunited with his son, Jesse A. Foulkes.

Samuel Foulkes left home in the fall of 1884 in search of employment. His wife, in Ithaca, received letters from him regularly and finally received word that he had been fatally injured in a fall from a scaffold.

$10,000 Voted to Aid Irish Flood Victims

Dublin, Irish Free State, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Free State government today subscribed $10,000 for relief of flood victims in Dublin and Bray.

President Cosgrave, writing in support of the fund, said:

"I personally visited the affected areas and have seen the havoc wrought. I sincerely trust the appeal for funds will result in a generous response."

American Attacked by Tiger in Brazil

Asuncion, Paraguay, Sept. 8 (INS)—John S. Tharzer, an American citizen and member of a scientific expedition to Matto Grosso, Brazil, was in a serious condition at a hospital here today as the result of an encounter with a tiger.

Tharzer was attacked by the beast while exploring in an isolated district of Brazil's wildest state.

Man Near Death in Fire

Hollis, N. H., Sept. 8 (AP)—Leon Shanley was critically burned today in a fire which destroyed the house and barn of the Charles J. Bell stock farm with a loss estimated at $30,000. Shanley was burned while trying to get out of the barn.

OFFICE SELLER SENTENCED

James E. Leahy, 41, of Lonsdale st., Dorchester, alleged to have defrauded would-be court officers, was held in $1500 in Quincy court today on two counts of larceny and one of operating an auto without a license.

Leahy appealed a sentence of six months and a fine of $25.

Eight Quincy policemen were happy when they learned of Leahy's plight, for more than a year ago, they alleged, he had duped them while posing as a coal salesman.

Leahy was captured last night in Randolph after a half-mile chase by Police Chief Patrick McDonald and another Randolph officer.

The capture was brought about by Charles Mullins of Mill st., Randolph, who told police he had given Leahy $18 on the latter's promise to get him a court officer's post in Boston.

Mullins said, Leahy offered him the court officer's job on Aug. 18, but said he would need $10 to start action. Mullins said he gave up the $10 and that later Leahy got $8 more for "insurance and bonding."

Police recalled that George E. White, also of Mill st., had reported being victimized similarly in December, 1929.

LE BRECQUE INC. CALLED 'BROKE'

Appointment of a receiver for Alfred N. LeBrecque, Inc., a company controlled by Quincy city council president, who committed suicide Aug. 29, was asked today by the Zurich General Accident and Liability Insurance Co., Ltd., of Boston.

The company alleges $24,569.43 is due it from LeBrecque's concern, and that the latter is insolvent.

The receivership petition was filed in the equity division of Suffolk Superior Court and will be given a hearing tomorrow.

The alleged debt is for insurance premiums collected. The petition says LeBrecque owned all but three shares of Alfred N. LeBrecque, Inc., and was its president and treasurer.

Lexington Couple 61 Years Wedded

Their 61st wedding anniversary was observed today by Mr. and Mrs. William H. Nash in their home, 1 Berwick rd., Lexington. Nash, until his retirement four years ago, was assistant treasurer of M. P. Clough, investment brokers.

DEAD MAN WILL REVEAL PLOT

Perry, Ia., Sept. 8 (AP)—County Attorney George Sackett said today that John M. Smith, insecticide manufacturer, has promised to tell a grand jury all the details of an alleged insurance plot in which he disappeared last winter, leaving an embalmed body of an unidentified man in his burned automobile.

The county attorney said also that Mrs. Smith had signed a statement admitting her husband's disappearance was part of a plan whereby she was to collect $60,000 insurance policies on his life.

COURT PERMITS WATER SUIT

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, it is expected, will be sued for $100,000 damages for diversion of the flood waters of the Ware river, as a result of a decree today by Judge Henry T. Lummus of superior court.

Judge Lummus gave Attorney George Alpert of Boston, a receiver of the George W. Wheelwright Paper Co. of Leominster and Hardwick, permission to bring suit against the state.

The water is being diverted in connection with the new Metropolitan Boston water supply system.

Walking Bomb Taken Without Clubbing

New York, Sept. 8 (INS)—"Handle me with care, I'm loaded," said Frank Smith as police seized him today in a movie theater. He had in his pockets three ounces of nitroglycerine.

The police treated him gently, and they were also gentle in Frank Fink, 28, whom they found hiding in a closet of the theater. Both men, police say, had been preparing to blow open the theater safe, containing $6000.

Manila Davis Delayed by Leak

New York, Sept. 8 (INS)—Miss Manila Davis, missing West Virginia flier, was safe in New York today. She had been missing for hours after failing to arrive on schedule from the Cleveland air show, finally arriving at Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., last evening.

Miss Davis said she was delayed when forced down several times by a leaking gas tank.

Today, in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment.

WIFE ENDS LIFE AS MATE FLEES

Brockton, Sept. 8—Police today redoubled their search for Elmer G. Johnson, missing since last Tuesday, following the suicide of his wife, Mrs. Elsa M. S. Johnson, in her Menlo st. apartment yesterday.

Mrs. Johnson's body was found by her sister, Mrs. Ella Lindquist, who told police Mrs. Johnson had committed suicide by gas because of Johnson's reported elopement with a 19-year-old Avon girl.

The woman was fully clothed seated on a chair before the kitchen gas range. Three jets of the range were open and the doors and windows in the room were all tightly closed.

Medical Examiner Joseph Frane of Rockland, viewed the body and pronounced Mrs. Johnson a suicide.

Police have been searching for Johnson for two days since Mrs. Johnson reported he had dropped from sight after selling his interest in a radio accessory store to Milton Aldrich, his partner.

She told police he had gone away with the 19-year-old girl, with whom he admitted being "very friendly." Mrs. Johnson and a police officer went to the girl's home in Avon on Saturday and they were informed there that the girl had disappeared on Tuesday also. The girl's relatives said they had no knowledge of her whereabouts.

Daughter of Soviet Envoy for Films

Paris, Sept. 8 (INS)—Another recruit for Hollywood has come forward in the person of pretty Kaia Krassin, 24-year-old daughter of the former Soviet ambassador to London and Paris, who, according to rumors here, will soon be off for filmland.

Miss Krassin lives in an old house of the latin quarter with her mother and two sisters who intend to remain here. She says that she wants to go into films in order to earn money.

Safe Robbers Get $32 in Chelsea Job

The safe in the office of the W. T. Jones Milk distributing plant on Westerly st., Chelsea, was rifled early today and $32.60 taken. The combination was smashed off and the front door pried open. Entrance to the office was gained by breaking a rear window. Police took photographs of fingerprints.

Flier Moyle Facing Jail on Return to U. S.

Los Angeles, Sept. 8 (AP)—A deferred 30-day jail sentence awaits the return here of Don Moyle, who with C. A. Allen was en route today from Tokio on a flight to Seattle.

Moyle pleaded guilty in superior court here July 10 to a charge of driving while intoxicated and was sentenced to a month in jail, with three years probation added.

'COWFACE' CASH HUNTED

knew that you were obstructing justice?" Detective Southern asked Eva.

"No, I did not," said Miss Strother, "I was only doing what I was told to do."

Interviewed by a newspaper man, the women were asked if they had any knowledge of Powers' crime.

"Of course we didn't," they answered. "We never thought he was like that, but just a kind, loving husband. Now, we both are afraid of him."

Eva Strother said:

"God is on our side and knows that we are both innocent of any wrongdoing."

Mrs. Powers was asked:

"You have said that Harry Powers only gave you $12 in three months and that he had no money. Where did you think he got the $3657 check you women transferred to his account?"

"We thought he had an income," answered Mis. Strother.

"He told us he owned tanneries out in Iowa," said Mrs. Powers.

"Did you ever think the money might have belonged to Mrs. Lemke or some other woman?" they were asked.

"Oh, we never thought of such a thing," they answered.

WIDOW HAD $15,000

Mrs. Dorothy Lemke, it developed, had nearly $5000 in cash, $4000 in securities and about $1400 in jewelry.

Undergoing his daily questioning at the hands of officials, Slaughter House Harry" declared he did not remember ever being in Yorkville, Ill.

F. F. Weber, justice of the peace at Yorkville and proprietor of a general store, wrote Sheriff Grimm that he had identified Powers from his picture as the man who had been in his store on September 3, 1930, and had asked if there were "any rich widows" in town. Weber said that the man told him that he had been to Chicago on business.

Powers stuck to his story even when confronted with a picture of the general store in Yorkville.

WILL TIE UP PROPERTY

Sheriff Grimm, through the filing of the affidavit in chancery court today, intends to tie up the property which Powers is supposed to have appropriated from the Massachusetts widow. The sheriff is the administrator of the estate of Mrs. Lemke.

The filing document also charges that Harry F. Powers, "by falsely and fraudulently promising to marry Mrs. Lemke and by representing himself as a man of great wealth and by deceit and intimidation, obtained from Mrs. Yemke money, bonds and personal property to the value of $15,000 at the least."

It is set forth that this money specifically amounted to $4287.22 and that $9000 in bonds, stocks and jewelry were placed by Powers in a safe deposit box in the bank.

BOX IN BANK IS EMPTY

The safe deposit box of Powers in the Empire National Bank here was found to be empty, Frank M. Powell, counsel for the administrator of the Lemke estate declared today, following service of attachment papers on the bank for the box.

The contents of the box were removed on Aug. 28, the day the bodies of Mrs. Asta Eicher and her three children, of Park Ridge, Ill., were found near the Powers "murder garage," counsel said.

Mrs. Powers and her sister have had the keys to the safety deposit box.

Powell said the next legal step would be to seek a court order to compel J. Ed Law, counsel for Powers, to turn over any papers which may have been found in the box, to Sheriff Wilford Grimm, administrator of the Lemke estate.

Bluebeard's Counsel Appeals to Hoover

Washington, Sept. 8 (INS)—President Hoover has been asked to intercede to obtain "justice" for Harry T. Powers, the Bluebeard slayer of West Virginia, it was learned today.

Counsel for the matrimonial agency Lothario wrote President Hoover complaining vigorously over the alleged third degree treatment accorded him, and demanding an investigation of the circumstances that led up to his purported confession.

The letter, signed by J. Ed Law, counsel for Powers, was merely acknowledged by a White House secretary and forwarded to the Department of Justice for whatever action is deemed necessary.

The department has taken no action, and it was indicated today there is very little prospect of the department's interesting itself in the matter.

ASTOR ST. BLAZE ROUTS FIFTEEN FROM SUITES

Fifteen persons were driven to the street when fire destroyed the living room of a second floor suite in Astor st., Back Bay.

The blaze, which started in the suite occupied by Miss Caroline Stone, gained considerable headway before it was discovered.

Mrs. Mary McLeod, occupying a suite across the hall, smelled smoke and called fire headquarters.

Smoke filled the corridors of the second, third and fourth floors, and created considerable excitement as the tenants fought their way to the street.

Miss Stone had left her apartment before the fire was discovered and firemen were forced to batter down the door of her suite to reach the blaze. Damage was estimated at $700.

WOMEN PAWNS IN MAIL-ORDER LOVE CLUBS

Listed as 'Merchandise' by Scheming Racketeers Who Use Them Only To Get Their Cash

Wealthy women are the merchandise, and every effort is put forth to satisfy the men customers of the mail-order matrimonial clubs.

"Try our ladies for quality and value" is the substance of their appeal to the male applicant for their get-rich-quick version of the old wedding bells air.

The Boston Evening American investigation of these clubs was concluded almost coincidentally with the murder by Harry F. Powers of two women and three children whose acquaintance he had made by mail. And the methods of the club which furnished him their names are here further described in the third article of the series.

Many of the matrimonial clubs subscribed to by "Herbert K. Davis," fictitious name employed by the Boston Evening American in its investigation, undoubtedly fell that their obligation ended when they had cashed his check for the membership fee and mailed him their list of ladies.

But the American Friendship Society—the club from which the mail-order murderer Powers obtained his victims' names—endeavored to go a step further.

"We spend thousands of dollar for advertising yearly," their circular letter said, "so that we may bring to YOU, and place at your disposal, hundreds of ladies from every walk of life."

WHAT YOU GET

Just how many, and which, the club placed at the disposal of Powers, police are endeavoring to learn by consulting the society's voluminous records.

The magnitude of the task looms when you read on into their mail-order promises.

"You will enjoy the following BENEFITS: Your description will be mailed to over 1000 ladies, and written up in as attractive a manner as possible.

"You will receive all the ladies th join every month for a stamped envelope."

That's pretty cheap. And the service of dressing Herbert—or Powers—up in enticing phraseology is not to be overlooked. The American Friendship Society was among the few that offered it.

Nor were these the only advantages.

"You may rent a box at this office and have your description go out with the box number ONLY, if you do not wish your name and address sent out to the members."

FOR FRIENDS

Such a mailing arrangement, for men ..ly, might readily serve the purposes of a plundering fiend, going in for mail-order love on a wholesale basis.

And apparently many wealthy women were still willing to enter into correspondence with a grab-bag suitor, answering all questions concerning themselves and their property, asking not even the most rudimentary ones concerning their correspondent's name, community standing and place of business or residence.

Herbert K. Davis himself employed the anonymous P. O. Box system of correspondence, and reaped a harvest of many hundreds of letters full of tender thoughts of love.

"I have been rushed and overloaded with correspondence," one lady does mildly complain, "but there always seems to be room for a few more."

It was, moreover, disappointing to learn of one young lady, cataloguer as well-to-do, that:

"Being unkissed and untouched is my greatest richness."

But that may have been merely her personal point of view and it is not certain she had not a few interesting property values on the side.

The widows and spinsters who have passed youth and beauty's high water mark are so fawning in these letters in their attempts to please, despite their property rights:

"I am never cross," one of them insists. "Of course if someone ruffs the hair the wrong way,—but I am almost always pleasant. I love a man with pep."

And then she naively reveals the reason for her desire to wed:

"I think my two boys want me to get married. They have hinted at it."

A spinster of some refinement goes so far as to tell her anonymous sweetheart:

"I am listening to the radio. When I finish this letter I shall retire, thinking of you."

LETTER MADE HER HAPPY

Dozens of them, apparently, retired thinking of Powers, a glorified Powers, handsome and affectionate, all decked out in fine phrases provided at no extra cost by the American Friendship Society.

"I received your letter this morning," writes still another, "and am so happy I simply don't know what to do."

Meanwhile the American Friendship Society, in its circulars, described itself as the "World's Greatest Club" of its kind, and added:

"To keep the good faith of our members, who endorse us as a commendable and worthy institution, we do not solicit the membership of any person whose intentions are not honorable. We wish to deal only with those of good morals and character."

Such statements can be found in the literature of practically all the matrimonial clubs flourishing throughout the United States.

But as these clubs conduct no investigation of men subscribers before accepting their membership fee, the phrases in reality mean little. For they leave the burden of self-denunciation up to the applicant.

There will be more startling data on the marriage racket tomorrow.

COUNT LOUIS IS GOING HOME

Baltimore, Sept. 8 (AP)—Comte Louis De La Bassetiere, who spent three and a half days at Ellis Island on suspicion he was a job seeker when he came to America in 1930, is to return to France Oct. 1.

Miss Cornelia Lee Briscoe, under whose patronage the count came to America, denied he was being deported.

"He wants to be back in Paris before the close of the French-Colonial Exposition," Miss Briscoe said.

"He has formed an attachment for the United States and dislikes to leave. But he has been away from home more than a year and thinks it about time he was returning."

He has been the guest here of Miss Briscoe and her mother, Mrs. James Briscoe, Jr., since April 27, 1930.

His protests that he had no intention of going to work coupled with appeals to the secretary of labor gained him a permit to remain in the country under a $1000 bond.

Jingle of wedding bells and sentimental nonsense is the bait set by the Betty True Club for the matrimony seeker. But many of the mail order marriage agencies use instead the rattling of the rich ladies' money bags to attract husbands. Harry F. Powers, yielded to such a lure, murdered his trusting brides. Above is sample of nonsense bait. This circular was used by one of the large friendship societies that Powers was a member of.

Jap Cabinet Takes Up Executions in China

Tokio, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Japanese cabinet today considered the shooting of Capt. Shintaro Nakamura, Japanese, as a spy, by Chinese troops in Manchuria a month ago.

Nakamura, another Japanese, a Mongolian and a Russian faced a firing squad together. The War Office declared the Japanese had certificates from Chinese officials authorizing them to make maps in Manchuria and Mongolia.

PAIR FOIL GIRL'S DEATH LEAP

An unidentified young woman was prevented from leaping from the Tower st. bridge into Fort Point Channel by Patrolman Daniel Slank, of the East Dedham st. station, and John Morris, of Washington st., Roxbury, early today.

The woman, described by police as 25 years old, 5 ft. 6 in. tall with dark brown hair and eyes, medium complexion and wearing a blue dress and grey stockings and shoes, was climbing the railing to leap into the water as the officer and citizen approached.

They pulled her from the railing, but were forced to struggle for some time with her before she was subdued. She was taken to the City Hospital and treated for contusions and abrasions of both legs.

Winchester Girl Rescued at Lake

Wolfeboro, N. H., Sept. 8—Gladys Moulton, 14, Winchester, Mass., niece of Mayor Herman Peterson of Winchester, is recovering at cottage of her father, Harry Moulton, after a thrilling experience on Lake Wentworth, after she and Ruth Swanson of Manchester were thrown into the water when a hand made sailboat capsized. They clung for more than an hour and a half to the side of the half-filled craft until Harold and Donald Aldrich, Newport, R. I., vacationists drew them into their boat.

MR. PU YI'S WIFE AN EX-QUEEN, ALL UPSET

Shanghai, Sept. 8—One of the wives of the former Emperor Hsuan Tung is planning to sue her imperial husband for separation, threatening suicide if he balks her plan.

The domestic difficulties of the former emperor, the last of the Manchus, were revealed with publication of a letter written by his wife to her sister.

For seven years the former emperor has been known as Henry Pu Yi, and has lived in comparative obscurity in the Japanese concession of Tientsin. The wife who plans suit against him has been reduced to living in a garret room.

In her letter Mrs. Pu Yi charged that two black servants of the ex-emperor came to her quarters and charged her on behalf of the former Manchu of insulting him by curses and actions in public.

Subsequently, she charged, the emissaries returned and abused her, accusing her of being lacking in manners and the "most uncultured woman" associated with the Chinese imperial family in the nearly 300 years of its unbroken reign.

Mrs. Pu Yi was reported to have served no ties on the ex-emperor that she would sue him for separation, demanding $500,000 expenses. Pu Yi balked at her demand for money.

CURLEY URGES FIVE-DAY WEEK

rectly estimate the number of extra persons who will be employed nor how much more the cost to the city will be.

PLANS DISCUSSED

"It is an evolutionary undertaking and we have no precedent. The plan will have to be worked out with extreme care and in such manner as to not unfairly burden the taxpayer.

"One of the things discussed was compensatory time off for employes, cutting out pay for overtime work. If that was put into effect I expect the city would be saved $100,000 on that item alone. That, of course, would mean additional employes could be hired to that extent, anyway.

"So far as I can observe we can put this plan into effect without additional legislation. I have consulted with Mr. Silverman and I feel quite confident that we can proceed with the proposition.

"One thing we discussed that will probably work out is putting all laborers on annual salary basis, instead of the present system of daily wages.

BOSTON TO HEAD WAY.

"I would like to see Boston the first city in the country to adopt the five-day week plan. I believe other municipalities and the government should follow suit.

"Industry must help provide jobs for those it puts out of work for labor-saving devices. It must either do that or we will have a permanent dole.

"Labor-saving devices are throwing 300,000 workers out of jobs in this country every year. What are we going to do, give them a dole, or cut the number of working days per week and, later, the number of hours per day?"

"The necessity for the 5-day week is here now. It has arrived but we don't all realize it.

"There are 5,000,000 unemployed in the United States. Some say 6,000,000, some 7,000,000 but 5,000,000 is a conservative estimate.

SPEED MUST STOP

"Three million of those 5,000,000 want work and can't get it. If the 5-day week plan was accepted generally it would take care of the entire unemployment problem, absorbing the 3,000,000 who want work and can't get it.

"The time is rapidly approaching when speed-up processes must be done away with in industry.

"We've got to regulate the use of automatic machinery in America or give the workers a permanent dole. As an example there is a hat factory in Connecticut making these new derbies for women, working 24 hours a day. In a few months it can turn out enough for the population of the entire world.

"Within three years you will see the five day week generally accepted in America—or in five years at the longest period.

"The salvation of America is to keep up wages, keep the purchasing power of the people up. The only hope is a larger distribution of wages.

PROSPERITY NEEDED

"Increased prosperity among our own people is the only solution to bring us prosperity as a nation. It does not lie in foreign trade. Europe is fighting viciously for its own trade.

"Under the 5-day plan Boston will require more employes but just how many more I can't say and I won't guess. Of course, it will cost some more money but how much I am not prepared to say, either. The system is to be worked out so the taxpayer will not be unnecessarily burdened."

TOBACCO-CHEWING FISH

Experts Make 'em Nicotine Addicts

By GOBIND BEHARI LAL

New York, Sept. 7 (INS)—When it comes to the use of tobacco, the goldfish seems almost human.

Goldfish can become addicted to use of tobacco. As the habit grows on them they can tolerate larger and larger doses of nicotine. Ultimately the hardened fish can swallow, without any apparent damage, an amount of tobacco juice which would kill a goldfish that does not have the tobacco habit.

This has been ascertained by two French physicians, Leon Binet and C. Zamfir. They trained goldfish to develop tolerance of water in which tobacco had been kept soaked.

At first only a very small dose of the tobacco solution was added to the fish bowl. Then, on alternate days, larger and larger quantities were mixed in the bowl.

After two months of experimentation, the tobacco-using fish were able to swim in the tobacco extract, which was so strong that ordinary goldfish that had not been taught to imbibe nicotine died in it within an hour.

'KIDNAPED' BOY JUST ROAMING ABOUT TOWN

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 8—Edgar F. Hazleton, Jr., New York boy who was thought to have been kidnaped two weeks ago, was picked up by Pennsylvania railroad police here.

The boy was in New Orleans or Mobile, railroad police said, when he learned through newspapers about the efforts to obtain money from his parents for his return. He immediately started to return by hitchhiking and by riding blind baggage.

The railroad police arrested him as he was about to "hop" a train for New York. He carried a newspaper with a story about the "pigeon kidnapers" with a picture of himself. The boy had no money.

Police notified his parents, who arrived here by automobile during the night, identified him, and took him home.

Railroad police said they were sure that the boy knew nothing about the ransom plot and that persons who knew of his absence from home took advantage of it to attempt to extort money from his father.

The boy said he left his parents' summer home at Norwalk, Con., of his own accord, Aug. 20. A week later his father received instructions to send $2000 by carrier pigeons placed at a street intersection in New York if he wished his son returned.

STUDENTS HIT IN GUN BATTLE

Chicago, Sept. 8 (AP)—Two high school students were wounded and several hundred others endangered by bullets fired in a running pistol battle between state's attorney's detectives and three suspected robbers in an automobile today.

The chase that led through streets crowded with students leaving for the noon recess of the first day of school started when two detectives attempted to arrest the three men in connection with the robbery of a newspaper agency two hours earlier.

As the bandit car neared the school, one of its occupants turned and opened fire, and the detectives returned it.

Michael Natalie, 18, and Frank McBride, 16, were struck each in the right leg by the bullets. They were sitting on a curb munching sandwiches.

'DUAL WIFE' TO REMAIN UNDER MENTAL TEST

Worcester, Sept. 8—Mrs. Elsie Lavigne, 40, who climaxed 20 years of married life in one man with an alleged bigamous marriage to another within a few blocks of her home, will remain under observation at the Worcester State Hospital for 28 more days.

Committed for a 10-day period of mental tests, she proved a puzzle to the state alienists, who asked the district court for the continuance.

After 20 years of marriage to Henry J. Lavigne, a painter, she is charged by police with going through a marriage ceremony last June with James M. Tully, and dividing her time between the two households without arousing the suspicions of either man for four months.

Last month Lavigne, his suspicions aroused by her continued absences form his nursing cases, followed her and learned of her alleged double life. He procured a warrant for her arrest.

LADY ASTOR IS FIRST IN SEAT

London, Sept. 8 (AP)—Lady Astor, first woman to sit in the British Parliament, today was the first member of either sex to stake a claim for a seat in the special session of the House of Commons.

She was among 40 who burst into the chamber when the doors opened and nimbly reached her chosen position, an easy first.

With a cry of delight she placed her white card on the seat at the end of the third row on the government side of the House, corresponding to the one she had occupied on the opposition benches in the session that closed in July.

JACQUELINE MRS. CARUSO GLORIA

Mrs. Dorothy Benjamin Caruso Ingram, widow of the famous opera star, with her daughters, Gloria Caruso and Jacqueline, as they arrived on the S. S. Conte Grande in New York yesterday after a stay abroad. Jacqueline is an adopted daughter.

GANDHI URGES ARMS TRUCE

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 8 (AP)—Din o Grandi, Italy's foreign minister, proposed today that the League of Nations assembly declare an immediate truce, in building of armaments, to continue through the period of the disarmament conference to be held next February.

His proposal evoked no immediate demonstration of enthusiasm, but later there was lively discussion in the lobbies. The German delegates particularl appeared well pleased.

Grandi, reminding the assembly that the League covenant is only 12 years old and urged the nations not to tinker with it so much until its real spirit is more firmly implanted. Instead of creating more complicated machinery to supplement the covenant, he said, the nations should make some definite move to make disarmament provisions effectual.

Chicago Teachers Go Back to Payless Jobs as Schools Reopen

Chicago, Sept. 8 (AP)—The big question in the minds of Chicago school teachers as they resumed work today after the summer vacation was "When will we get paid?"

Due to a tax muddle, the pedagogues haven't been paid in money since the last of April. Some of them, however, have accepted "scrip" which is acceptable in exchange for merchandise by some merchants.

The total amount due board of education employes is almost $12,000,000.

Thieves Steal $38 in Revere Store

A chain store on Broadway, Revere, was entered early today, netting the thieves $38, which they found in a can used as a hiding place on one of the shelves. A quantity of cigarettes was also taken. They first broke into the adjoining cellar and entered the store by disconnecting a heat pipe and removing th register.

In another chain store on North Shore rd., a large circle of glass was cut from one of the windows but nothing was taken.

RUTH BRYAN IN LITERARY BOW

Washington, Sept. 8 (AP)—Representative Ruth Bryan Owen's name makes its debut as author in the books of this month, on the subject for which the Bryan family is famed—oratory.

Dedicated to her father, the late William Jennings Bryan, her book "Elements of Public Speaking," tells how those supposed to be "born orators" acquire their proficiency by diligent devotion to the art.

A foreword by William Lyon Phelps, Yale University orator, compared Mrs. Owen to the person mentioned in St. Matthew, who, given five talents, "increased the sum to 10 and won the approbation of his Lord."

Humorously, Mrs. Owen gives a "before and after" picture on the eloquent one, based, she frankly admits, on her own experiences.

She narrates early struggles of many orators, including her own father, to prove he contention that oratory is not a "gift," and that in this age when "every man and every woman" is called upon to make a few remarks, all can learn to do it well.

$25,250,000 Sought for Bank Depositors

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—Stockholders of the Bank of United States, now in liquidation, were called upon by Joseph A. Broderick, superintendent of banks, today to contribute $25,250,000 for the benefit of depositors. This is a 100 per cent assessment upon the 1,010,000 shares of $25 par value stock held by 22,500 stockholders.

The wool crepes, sheer, light weight and carefully woven in fascinating rough surfaces, are usually found only in the more expensive dresses. The canton crepes have a richness that one seldom finds in dresses at this price.

Style—Cleverly copied from the season's acknowledged successes that are much higher in price. The wools are handled as deftly as the crepes with pleats, tucks and careful detail. Diagonal lines, two-piece styles with a coat that goes nicely with another frock, faggoting so smart this fall, contrasting collar and cuffs—in fact, practically every whim of fashion.

ALTHOUGH IT IS TWO MONTHS OFF, THE CHARITY BALL, which will inaugurate the official opening of the social season at the New Waldorf-Astoria in New York, is being talked about. Miss Ruth Vanderbilt Twombly, chairman of the executive committee of the Opportunity Shop and executive member of the A. I. C. P., and Mr. Lucius Boomer, president of the Waldorf-Astoria, have announced the organization, the patronesses and the entertainment planned for this popular annual event.

MRS. DAVID J. EVANS

Like the famous formal concert that first opened the old Waldorf in 1893, the ball is expected to attract the cream of society from this and other cities. Three thousand guests will be invited, and these include a number of socially prominent people who attended the first opening of the Waldorf 38 years ago, as well as distinguished visitors from abroad.

The fact that the ball will be in behalf of charity is in keeping traditions of the old Waldorf. The first openings of the Waldorf, and later the Waldorf-Astoria, were devoted to philanthropic purposes. It is doubtful, however, if these events, lavish as they were, will equal in brilliance and color the ball which will be one of the outstanding events of the coming season.

Succession of Entertainments

THE BALL WILL BE HELD ON NOVEMBER 6 AND all the facilities for public entertaining in the new hotel will be put to use, and from early in the evening until dawn there will be a succession of entertainments featured consecutively in the various ballrooms. Each will be different in character, the underlying motif being "A Night in Paris." For this purpose the great ballroom of the hotel, the Empire and Sert Rooms, the Astor Gallery, the ballroom foyers, the Basildon and Jade Rooms will be used for dancing and entertainment.

MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE arranging details are Miss Ruth Vanderbilt Twombly, chairman; Mesdames Cornelius N. Bliss and Kenneth P. Budd, vice-chairmen, and Mr. Thomas Cochran, treasurer. The executive committee comprises Mr. M. H. Aylesworth, Mr. Lucius Boomer, Mr. A. Morris Bagby, Mrs. James A. Burden, Mr. Samuel L. Fuller, Mr. Charles Hayden, Mrs. Harry N. Hempstead, Mr. Leo Lerman, Mrs. Charles K. Morrison and Mr. Conde Nast.

THE PATRONESSES ARE Mrs. Winthrop Aldrich, Mrs. Vincent Astor, Miss M. H. Aylesworth, Mrs. Courtlandt Barnes, Mrs. Charles T. Barney, Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. Wendell Biggers, Mrs. Lucius Boomer, Mrs. Henry Breckenbridge, Mrs. William Bristow, Mrs. Wm. A. M. Burden, Mrs. E. Marshall Field, Mrs. Henry P. Fletcher, Mrs. E. Roland Harriman, Mrs. Albert H. Harris, Mrs. Arthur Curtis James, Mrs. Walter B. James, Mrs. Arthur Ketcham, Mrs. Kenneth O'Brien, Mrs. Frank L. Polk, Mrs. William C. Potter, Mrs. John T. Pratt, Mrs. John H. Prentice, Mrs. John Sloane, Mme. Samaroff Stokowski, Mrs. Twombly, Mrs. William G. Whitehouse, Mrs. Harrison Williams and Mrs. William Woodward.

THE JOHN CHAPINS HAVE called off their dance on October 23 for daughter, Martha. Perhaps there are so many other parties on that day is the reason for this cancellation.

NO WONDER SO MUCH entertaining will be done for Lydia Evans. Her mother, Mrs. David J. Evans (Rosa mond Allen) is a belle of Old Boston and Lydia will step out from the brownstone front that her grandmother tip-toed from years ago. Her father, Mr. Evans, was a celebrated doctor in Quebec —very English —with sandy-hair from whence comes Miss Lydia's glorious halo of burnished bronze hair. She combines the dignity and charm of her mother with the intelligence and pep of her father. Every atom will be turned to make this a BIG winter for deb daughter. She has been educated in Canada, England, France and then the "last year at Winsor" which is an important to get to with Boston's NEW people who somehow seem to always run things. It is amazing how times have changed.

* * *

THE EVANS HAVE THREE lovely homes, Beacon st., Dover and North Harbor. Mrs. Evans is an important factor in the Women's Municipal League and has as colleagues Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, Miss Evelyn Sears, Mrs. Ronald T. Lyman and all of them will do nice things for Lydia.

CABARET WILL AID HOSPITAL

AT NORTH SHORE DANCE

Mr. Morton Claflin and Miss Mary Brown were among the throng who attended a recent dance which was held for charity along the North Shore. They are also active in affairs at the Marblehead yacht clubs.

Crane Estate Will Be Scene of Benefit

The coffers of the Children's Hospital, that well-equipped institution which is doing such marvelous work for the sick children of Boston and surrounding towns, will be richer as a result of the dance to be given on Friday evening at the estate of Richard C. Crane, Jr., in Ipswich.

Society folk along the North Shore will provide the entertainment for the cabaret which will be a feature of the evening. Miss Charlotte Lyman, deb daughter of the Ronald T. Lymans of the season past, will dance solo numbers, and Mr. George Houston will sing.

A family singing and dancing act will be put on by the Alvin F. Sortwells and their four daughters. The Sortwell children have been trained at the Miriam Winslow School of the Dance, and show marked talent. Sally White and Anne Dick are on the program in a song and dance number, and Helen Warren, daughter of Mrs. Sam Warren, will contribute vocal solos. Miss Senta Bartlett, a debutante of the coming year, will be one of the song and dance artists.

Miss Anne Warren, who heads the committee in charge, has returned from abroad to put the party over, and her mother, Mrs. Sam Warren, will be one of the dinner hostesses on Friday evening. Mrs. Philip Stockton is also entertaining at dinner, as are Miss Rachael Warner and Mrs. George von L. Meyer, Jr.

THE MOST formal sort of tea costume is best and the dainty costume pictured would be delightfully appropriate of black transparent velvet and white satin.

THE ONE-PIECE dress of velvet has a yoke of satin crossing center front to deep point and extending over the shoulder to formal sleeve tops. The straight line skirt has inserted side sections, and the self belt has small buckle of brilliants. The little jacket extends to a tie sash about the waist, and folds to reverse faced in white satin. The sleeves are three-quarter length faced in the satin and terminating in the graceful saddle shoulder line.

* * *

THE BLACK hat is of hatters' plush and felt, reversed to be interest in the upturned brim which is marked by a group of ostrich tips fancy white, black and yellow effectively posed from under brim at left side.

Chic Gown for Receptions

By ANN ARDEN

OFTEN AT a wedding the guests, or the greater part of them, are invited to the reception only. And very often this sort of a gathering is set for the late afternoon.

* * *

NOW, FOR an occasion of this sort, a formal afternoon dress is worn, meaning either a dressy suit or a more or less effective dress worn with a formal coat.

* * *

THE HAT that is worn, and there should of course be a hat, should be of the more dressy type.

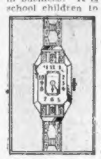
Shopping with Priscilla Price

Dearest Anne:

Come with me this week and see for yourself how the vanguard of the fashion revolution has taken Dame Boston by storm! The shops are filled with new things, all trying to keep up with the little hats that upset all the old traditions. And shopping from now on is going to be more like a voyage of discovery than a search for things to keep out the autumn winds. You'll notice, my dear, that the 1931 fashions have a different chic than the old modes that inspired them. The leg-o-mutton sleeves, the clinched-in waists, the ruffles and the fitted jackets may be revivals of the fashions of a bygone day, but they certainly are not copies of them!

Waltham Watch, $18.50!

At the E. B. Horn Co. Punctuality is as important in school as in business! It is easy to train school children to be prompt if they have a dependable watch to tell them the correct time! And with school and college days approaching it is imperative to have the right time. The Waltham watch is recognized for its sturdiness and dependability—it has established the reputation of American watches in competition to the finest types of European time pieces. The E. B. Horn Co., famous for years for selling Waltham watches are selling this beautiful Waltham watch sketched for only $18.50! It is usually priced $27.50! It's a watch you can be proud to wear and one you surely can depend upon for accuracy. The E. B. Horn Co., 429 Washington St., Boston. They have been over 50 years at this location.



Here's Real News

and welcome news to women who no longer need to be told that they have an expensive foot! I saw a whole window, filled with smart, new fall styles in the famous Enna Jettick shoes shown at White's today, and their style, quality and price reminded me again of my nurse friend's preference for Enna Jettick shoes! And they are these models, shown by White's Thrift Basement, compare with shoes you'd expect to pay much, much more for, yet they are always sold for $5 and $6. One of the smartest is that called the "Iris," shown in black and brown—And really, you couldn't ask for anything better looking on the foot. Widths run from AAAAA to EEE and sizes from 1 to 12. If you want to see some thing different, style-right, while retaining every bit of its comfort, do look at that window! White's Thrift Basement.

Clever Hats!

Hats that only the genius of Josephine Valenti could create! Truly, smart women, who like despaired of the very extreme models of this season, depend upon Miss Valenti for hats that embody the best of the newest Empress Eugenie modes, and yet retain their individuality. All are fitted and fashioned with that elusive touch which distinguishes the unusual in millinery. You may have any hat you wish, made especially for you—one that accents your best features and stresses your own personality, because it was made for you and you alone. Miss Valenti charges but $10 and up. You may have your old hats remodeled. You'll be perfectly delighted with Miss Valenti's work—and you'll find her prices most reasonable. Josephine Valenti, Exclusive Millinery, 41 Winter street, Room 707.

Cleopatra's Beauty

secrets are no longer hidden, her charm no longer a mystery that fascinates as we read again how the power of beauty swayed the hearts of men in the long ago. Today modern science has discovered how she did it! And the secret lay largely in the lure of her flawlessly perfect, creamy skin. Every woman may now possess the same lovely skin, since Adala Beauty Lotion has captured the secret and bottled it for everyday use. This is the new lotion that cleanses, protects and refines the pores, giving rough, sunburned complexions the pearly glow of health and beauty. The purity of its ingredients insures successful treatment of freckles, windburn and tan, or any other skin blemish. It is exquisitely perfumed, and is priced within the reach of all—a large bottle for 50 cents. On sale at the Epstein Drug Store, 2 Scollay square.

Copper With Pewter

When I was in high school mother and I often visited grandma, who lived on a farm in New Hampshire. She had a whole cupboard full of the loveliest old pewter, and I always admired it. That's why I welcomed the modern pewter pieces when they came into vogue again a couple of seasons ago. Now I see that craftsmen have realized the artistic possibilities of combining modern pewter with copper and the blending of these two metals is the last word in the metalsmith's art. Honestly, Anne, I was fascinated to find the quaint old designs reproduced with all the charm of the originals, many of them just like grandma's old pieces. In Filene's Gift Shop you'll find that the selection of copper and pewter pieces has been made by someone who certainly knows how to choose the type of intimate home we like to live with . . . those homey, decorative utilities that we like to have around, restful things we never tire of. I'm planning to buy one piece each week, and if no unexpected weddings or forgotten birthdays pop up I shall make a pre-Christmas gift chest and give some of my real friends a happy surprise on December 25th. When you visit the gift shop you will see a stunning water set, with copper base and copper rim; pewter pitcher, and goblets to match; tea sets of handsome design, candlesticks, ash trays, bowls of many sizes, and tobacco jars, vegetable dishes, trays and vases, showing the wide range of design in this new art. Copper with pewter is absolutely fashion-right this season; that's why I'm choosing them for gifts. Filene's Gift Shop, Franklin St. entrance.

There Is Nothing

so captivating as beautiful wavy hair—and few show smarter coiffures than Elsie Parker's Beauty Shop. That's where the girls go for the latest styles and the newest creations. And their prices are reasonable, too! You'd be surprised how a few Croquignole curls will bring back that soft, lustrous wave to summer permanents. So many smart women are having her do that just now, and it only costs $2 to $4! She does a Derby bob that is certainly chic under the perky new hats and what she does for sun-streaked, bleached or faded hair for the returning vacationists is simply a marvel. Hair bleached to any shade, wave included, for $3. Take advantage of her Wednesday specials at $1. They include a shampoo and wave, or a manicure and wave, or a manicure and eye brow arch for only a dollar. Open evenings. Elsie Parker, 8 Winter St., Rm. 1001. Tel. phone Liberty 2050.

Leave It to Evelyn

to know what the gay young collegiates want returning to school! She has the most attractive array of strikingly simple gowns that you have ever seen, priced at $4.95—$8.95—$13.95 and up! All the new colors and the most wearable of the new styles are gathered here for your delight! Dresses with a simple wearable charm that distinguishes "this year's clothes." Frocks that are just the thing for school, office or what you will—and the charm of her low prices is sure to make a surefire hit with school girls, business women, housewives, everybody! There are thin woolen things that are stunning—Fascinating velvets, smart satins and fine cottons and silk crepes that are simply distinguished. Charming dresses to wear now—and all through the winter. Juniors', Misses', Women's and half sizes. Evelyn's Dress Shop, 8 Winter St., 3rd floor.

The Most Popular Girl

at the party last night, Anne, was none other than the little brunette who used to have such an unsightly dark shadow on her upper lip suggesting that hang to loveliness—superfluous hair. You remember her. What do you think she did? She went to Miss Elizabeth Sparkes, our electric needle specialist, for advice, and she could have all horrid growths quickly and easily removed forever. What a change! Miss Sparkes takes so much interest in each case and has such sure, steady hands that it is a pleasure to go to her. She has a 40 needle multiple machine for removing hair growth from the arms and legs. Miss Sparkes does not charge for consultation. Elizabeth Sparkes, 120 Tremont St., Room 334, Tel. Hancock 7592.

Speaking of New Hats, especially of Griffin's new hats, is one of the pleasantest tasks I have in my talkative career. For every week, the smartest Fall hats are arriving in interesting big boxes, to take their place on Griffin's sneivas with still other fascinating models. Their hats are new in every sense of the word—they tilt saucily, they swagger a bit—they go to tea in plumes, but—they are not extreme, or ordinary. In their Fall group, you'll find Tricornes, modified derbies, hats that tilt over the right eye all becoming and flattering. Perhaps one of the nicest things about Griffin's hats is their price—$5.00 and up. They also have the newest Stetson hats for women, always style right, priced reasonably at $8.50—$10. Geo. L. Griffin and Son, Inc., 370 Washington Street.

Why Should You

buy a fur coat now? Because Scott Furriers, New England's largest Fur Establishment, at 69 Summer St., in Boston, is offering some exception al anniversary features that makes it smart to be in style and be thrifty! For example, they have an exciting group of 1931 fashionable cloth coats richly furred with skunk, caracul, kit fox, Chinese badger, Marmink and beaverette, specially priced at $37.50! And think of natural blue squirrel, black pony with skunk trim, gray caracul and leopard coats priced at $150! Their $145.50 fall dresses are shown in all the latest fabrics, too. You don't have to pay cash! Just join the Scott Unique Fur Club (registered—the only one in New England). Convenient weekly or monthly payments; no delay, no investigation! Scott Furriers stores: 69 Summer St., Boston; 209 Westminster St., Providence; 51 and 66 Pratt st., Hartford. Open evenings until 9 p. m.

Don't You Envy

the college girls, getting ready for school these days, Anne? You should see them making plans for "spreads" in their dorms, while they are busy organizing rooms, and I noticed that almost every girl is getting one of those lovely bridge slippers or Mule Sweeps at Queen Quality shoe store. Quality shoes for their school wardrobe this Fall. You know the kind I mean, those silk crepe bridge slippers, and pumps, in soft, pastel shades or black, with lovely contrasting linings and velvet bows, and slippers which harmonize with the new pajama ensembles as well are in several styles and colors. I also enjoy the favor of martly groomed young women. Both model slippers are priced unbelievably low. Only $1.85 at the Queen Quality Shoe shop, where you often see hostesses choosing bridge slippers for wear at their card parties, too. Queen Quality Shoe Shop is at 138 Tremont street.

If—

you realize the difference between retail and wholesale prices of dresses . . . If—you know the value of money . . . If—you appreciate a real, honest-to-goodness saving . . . If—you are tired of overpaying . . . Then, Anne, you will be glad that I told you about the New York Dress Mfg. Co., as you know that they specialize in sample dresses! This firm has thousands of dresses in all the new styles and materials to choose from. Their stock is arranged in four groups—$2.50—$3.75—$5.75 and $8.75. It's the only place I know of that carries a complete range of sizes at these low prices—Sizes 14½ to 20½—11 to 19—12 to 20—36 to 46! If you can duplicate any of their dresses at their prices—in any other retail store in the city—they will refund your money and give you the dress free! Exchanges and refunds are cheerfully made within five days if price tag has not been removed. There are always plenty of salesgirls to assist you—26 private dressing rooms. New York Dress Mfg. Co., 87 Washington St., second floor. (Opposite R. H. White's). This is their only st re.

After the Holiday

I know you are dying to get into the shops and see for yourself the wonderful values and exciting new fashions—and no wonder! How can anyone hesitate when autumn is so close and school bells and wedding bells ringing in so many places? Don't you just love it? Everywhere I shop I find such glorious news for you that I want to broadcast it far and wide and have every woman get the same thrill that I do out of shopping! I shall have more news to tell you next week, and until then—

Devotedly yours,

Priscilla

DEATHS AND BIRTHS? ALPHA RAY MIXUP

—By Gilbert Seldes—

A BOHEMIAN SCIENTIST has investigated the properties of certain rays of radium and has come to the conclusion that there is no reason why the human body should not be made "practically indestructible." Under these scientific terms, we hardly recognize the ancient promise of immortality, but that is what Dr. Jules Stoklasa, with precautions and reservations, seems to be offering to us. Or, at the least, he suggests that science can cure the worst of all diseases—old age.

GILBERT SELDES

It appears that old age is "simply a state in which the tissues of the body have become deoxidized and the state of complete deoxidization is death." One of the emanations of radium can check the process; two others can re-oxidize cell tissues, giving them life. Cautious, perhaps intimidated by his discovery, Dr. Stoklasa says that "theoretically" there seems to be no reason why the tissues which have been worn out should not be perpetually reinvigorated.

The doctor is the head of a station for the extraction of radium; he therefore stops short with his professional statement. Most of us will consider that the subject hasn't been properly plumbed until someone gives a good reason why the renewal of tissues should be desirable; most of us will want to know what conditions of life science can promise to those whose lives it has prolonged.

Immortality? Perhaps

I wonder whether humanity would actually accept endless life—or, even the doubling or tripling of the present span. We have always assumed so because the whole thing was impossible, but we never have had to think much about it. Immortality probably means to us the repetition of a specific day or month or year in our lives, when we were in the early twenties and for a brief moment everything was just exactly right, when we were well and prosperous and active and admired and loved.

The strangely human Greek gods grew from childhood into some such state of perfection, then stopped all change and growth, but kept on quarreling and making love and getting drunk and interfering with the Trojan War. It is a strange immortality—but it isn't exactly what science promises today.

I should like to be around when the official announcement is made. The insurance companies, which have been going in for annuities lately would be the first to protest; if their actuarial figures give a life expectancy of 65 years, it would upset them considerably to have the figure lifted to 65,000 years, during each of which they would be expected to pay $10,000.

If I were even now, head of an insurance company I would write a clause in every policy, an agreement on the part of the insured that he will not tamper with the processes of nature as we now know them; instead of worrying about hazardous occupations they should worry about glands and radium.

No Deaths; No Births

The next upheaval would be economic. We do not admit to ourselves that our system is based on the expectation that our parents will die; we are utterly dependent on weakening of the mind, hardening of the arteries, and the relaxation of energy which we call old age. Presently we should have two political parties: One in favor of immortality, one against it; and the first would perforce be the party of birth control, with a slogan: "No Deaths; No Births."

Between these radicals and conservatives would lie the liberals, earnestly pointing out that the particular people who are now alive and approaching senility aren't, after all, peculiarly fit to become immortal; they would suggest that the next generation should be trained in the thought of eternity, and be the first to undergo its pleasures.

And, as a footnote, I would like to know at what age the process of oxidization begins; in other words, is it time for us to rush to the Alpha ray at once? The age of 21 is legally the beginning of manhood; by common consent exception taken by younger people), the forties is the time of ripe maturity. But these figures are too vague.

The problem is too important to be left in the air. So, also, is the problem of discovering whom we would care at this moment to endow with another hundred years—out of all our brilliant leaders, our statesmen, our industrialists, our poets and our clowns.

Passionless Age

I have just finished reading a beautiful book in which none of the principal characters is less than 80 years old. It is called "All Passion Spent." Lady Slane, at 88, is at last widowed of her distinguished vice-regal and ducal husband; she rids herself of her dull and grasping children and isolates herself in a suburb of London. Her familiars there are a house agent, who believes that the end of the world is presently to come; a carpenter, and a recluse, who once met her in India, exchanged a glance and divined her secret that she was unhappy in the glare of the official life from which she could not escape.

It is an exquisite book and I recommend it as probably more interesting than radium rays. Reading it, you are the witness of a life misspent, wholly misdirected—yet not regretted. You suspect that a life in which a hundred years would represent the fervor and the fury of adolescence, another hundred the struggles and the successes of maturity, might be really unbearable. It would appear that our minds—or, for those who do not believe we have them—our nerves and our tissues are adjusted to bear a specific amount of strain.

Perhaps the scientists will join hands with inventors and a few economists and make life more attractive than it already is. Until they've done that it is hardly worth their while to prolong the agony.

"What these automatic elevators ne ed, deatie, is a couple of gigolos!"

What's a Grand?

—By Deems Taylor—

OF ALL THE THEORIES that have been advanced to account for the world's worry over money matters, one sounds particularly plausible. It is that we are paying for the war. For a decade we have been living, to speak, on the interest of our debts, but the instalment man has caught up with us at last; we must pay up or lose everything.

The theory gains rather than loses in plausibility the more one tests it.

Here, for instance, are a few statistics, the fruit of a morning's research through the pages of a 1930 World Almanac. You may find them a trifle dull; you will not find them inaccurate.

First, as to the cost in man-power of a good modern war. Every soldier killed in battle nowadays must be reckoned not only as an immediate military loss but also as a definite economic loss for what might have been the term of his natural life.

Of the sixty-five million men who fought the World War sixty million, certainly, had other professions or trades, in the pursuit of which they were being interrupted. A dead soldier, therefore, was a dead producer.

Well, the last war cost the world 8,543,515 producers. These were a total loss, having either died in action or of wounds or sickness. In addition, 21 million were wounded, many of them being incapacitated for life.

Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, among others, you will remember, who was bitter because we didn't prolong the war until the Allies could enter Berlin.

"Fight On!" Said Lodge

The statistics concerning war costs are not without interest also. In 1916 the public debt of the United States was a billion and a quarter dollars. In 1919 that debt was 25 and one-half billion. We have cut it down a bit since, but in 1929 we still owed nearly 17 billion—a bit over 14 times what we owed the year before our entrance into the war.

In 1898 and 1899 we had a war with Spain. It cost us $321,000,000, and we thought it was pretty expensive. In 1929, for construction work and maintenance of a peace-time navy, we spent $366,000,000.

In 1916, with war threatening, the United States army cost $164,000,000. In 1929 with the last war 10 years in the past and none scheduled for the immediate future, the United States army cost $416,000,000.

Costs Like What It Is

The seven leading industries of the United States are automobile manufacturing, iron and steel manufacturing, meat packing, clothing, printing and publishing, mill products, and petroleum products. They did a combined business of twenty billion dollars in 1927.

If we took every cent they earned in that year and threw it into the Atlantic Ocean we would have disposed of just the amount we spent to wage war in 1917 and 1918.

Here are the eight richest institutions of learning in the United States, together with the amount of their endowments:

Harvard University, $90,000,000.
Columbia University, $73,000,000.
Yale University, $69,000,000.
University of Chicago, $56,000,000.
Massachusetts Tech., $31,000,000.
Johns Hopkins University, $25,000,000.
Cornell University, $22,000,000.
Princeton University, $20,000,000.

The combined endowments of Chicago, Columbia, Massachusetts Tech. and Cornell would just pay the interest on our public debt for two and one-half months.

Harvard's total endowment would pay for four of our older battleships.

Yale's total endowment would pay for the maintenance of our army for two months.

The total endowment of Johns Hopkins would purchase the U. S. S. Colorado.

War is hell and costs like it.

Ex-Follies

Whenever racketeers are caught
By juries to be tried
For bunco games you'll find their dames
Are promptly glorified.
No matter who the ladies are
Who share such social whirls,
When crooks are bagged these queens are tagged
As "Former Follies Girls."

If all these cute accomplices
At once should come in view
The line would reach from Coney's beach
To heathen Timbuctoo.
Yet Florenz Ziegfeld never met
These Sallies, Suse and Pearls
Of titian tint described in print
As "Former Follies Girls."

Rating Hosts

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

WE WERE TALKING about hospitality. Americans are said to be the most generous people in the world. We love to entertain our friends—even our acquaintances; and there is not a visiting English or French lecturer who could not write reams of praise on our lavish kindness.

An Englishman must know you many years before he will give you the freedom of his home. But once you have gained his confidence there is no limit to his generosity.

I was traveling with some British officers during the war. Each morning on our boat Col. G. would come into the breakfast room and hail me with a hearty "Good morning," but I noticed that he seldom if ever addressed his compatriots. I spoke to him about this one day.

"Well," he said, "you see, it's this way: You're an American, and I know that you like to be spoken to; but Maj. W. is an Englishman, and I know that he doesn't wish me to intrude upon his privacy. We may seem like a lot of boors to you; but we're not, really. We simply understand one another.

They Even Sing It

I heard a song in a theater the other evening, the theme of which was that while New York was a fine place to visit, it was a terrible place to live in. For every Tom, Dick and Harry—every relative who had no claim upon us at all—descended upon us in Manhattan every so often and insisted upon being shown the town.

And the clever singer deplored the fact that she had to go up in elevators so often to reveal the view to her unwearying cousins and aunts. And she dolefully murmured that she would like to meet Mr. Otis one of these days.

How many evenings one has spent in cabarets so that Uncle Henry might get a thrill. How many speakeasy doors one has knocked upon when what one really wished was to be at home, snugly in bed. But Aunt Sarah and Cousin Willy, from the hinterlands, never seem to realize that, though we are New Yorkers, we are lovers of peace and quiet, and, like your true Parisian, seldom know the addresses of all the wicked little places that lurk in out-of-the-way neighborhoods.

Long ago Southerners were given much credit for their hospitality. But in the lonely days before the Civil War it must have been a blessing when a stage coach drove up to the door of some remote plantation and a dozen visitors stepped out.

They were probably received with open arms, and urged to remain indefinitely because they broke the awful monotony of an existence that must have been dreary indeed.

Southern Hospitality

Now, if some one thunders to your door in a flashing motor, he tarries for only a little while; and it is no distance at all to the next habitation. And we know when some one drops in on us that he wishes to come.

We are just as hospitable as of old, but in a different way. We see many more faces in a day than our ancestors saw in a year, sometimes. We need not kill people with kindness any more; but if we give them one little cup of refreshment our name is blessed, even though our tables do not groan with the lavish feasts our forebears were able to provide.

BULLETS KILL GIRL; EX-GRID STAR HELD

Chicago, Sept. 8 (INS)—Patrick "Buck" Gavin, 40, former Syracuse football star, was held today by police after the fatal shooting of his sweetheart, Evelyn Danielson, 21, a beauty parlor operator.

The girl was found dead in her kitchenette apartment after Gavin had notified police that she had committed suicide.

She had been shot three times.

Police established that the girl had been killed 18 hours before Gavin made his report.

Until recently he had lived with a woman known as "Marcella," according to police.

TIGER COACH TO GO UNDER KNIFE

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—Al Wittmer, head football coach at Princeton University, passed through New York today on his way to Princeton for an appendicitis operation this afternoon. The Washingtonian, a fast train, made a special stop at Pittsford to accomodate the Tiger coach.

Wittmer was accompanied by his wife, his brother, a nurse, and Doctor Ralph Jones of Princeton. The latter had rushed to him at Hanover, N. H., to persuade him the operation was necessary. Previously Wittmer had refused to undergo the operation because it would prevent his participation in the opening of football practice.

POLITICS

Notes and Gossip About People You Know

Arthur E. Linnell, first deputy insurance commissioner, of Wollaston, is speeding over the rails to Portland, Ore., where he will represent his chief, Commissioner Merton L. Brown, at the 62d annual convention of insurance commissioners. Since 1871, Massachusetts has not missed one of these conventions.

LINNELL IS 70

Deputy Commissioner Linnell will reach the retiring age of 70 years next July. He entered the department on August 10, 1891. When he goes out of service he will have 41 years to his credit.

GUIDES ARE NEEDED

The need of an active official guide at the State House is being commented upon with a great deal of regularity at the present time when so many out-of-state visitors are wandering around the capitol building. Few places in the nation are richer in historical mementoes and interest than the Beacon Hill edifice and it is felt that the visitors should get the benefit of authentic information and proper guiding.

FAIR ON WEEK-END TRIP

The Misses Josephine and Mary Fulton of the City Hall credit Union were among the many City Hall people who were in New York City over the holiday.

MISS LEONARD BACK

Miss Alice Leonard, chief telephone operator in Mayor Curley's office, returned to duty today after a two weeks' vacation in Gloucester, Me.

MISS WHITE ON VACATION

Miss "Bobbie" White, well known City Hall telephone operator, has started her annual two weeks' vacation. She is at Hyannis.

CHILDREN LIKE MURPHY

Former City Councilor Peter J. Murphy of Hyde Park, who is again a candidate for that office from Ward 18, is the hero of the children of that district. He is the man who several years ago defied the police of that section when they warned against coasting on Sundays and who presented such a bold front that they capitulated. Prior to that time children were unable to enjoy that sport on Sabbath afternoons in the winter because of Puritanical customs which had come down through the years.

1000 ENDORSE McGRATH

President Joseph McGrath of the Boston City Council seems assured of re-election. Of the first 1000 voters in his district, Ward 13, Dorchester, who were asked to endorse him for re-election only eight refused.

KOUPCHICK BACK

Samuel Koupchick, investigator for the city law department, today returned from a two weeks' vacation trip through Maine and Canada.

HE IS CAMPAIGN MANAGER

"Tim" Donnelly, who was one of the most staunch supporters of former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien in his various contests for public office, is now campaign manager for Walter Paige, candidate for city council from Ward 10, Roxbury.

RALLY FOR CURLEY

Supporters of Edward J. Curley, candidate for school committee, held a rally last night at their candidate's home in Grampian Way, Dorchester. Curley has received the endorsement of 21 political organizations, representing all sections of the city.

Yachtsman Dies

Oxford, Md., Sept. 8—Graham Johnson, 47, yachtsman, died of a heart attack a few minutes after finishing a star class yacht race in the harbor here. He died in the arms of his brother, C. Lowndes Johnson, as a speedboat rushed them to the wharf.

White man's civilization is gradually killing off the Esquimo. United States and Canada are negotiating plans to save these people of the North from extermination. Read about it in the American Weekly in the next Boston Sunday Advertiser, September 13.

GIRL LURED TO GANDHI-ISM BY RELIGION URGE

Aboard S. S. Rajputana, Sept. 8 (INS)—A new-found religious fervor prompted Miss Ladelaine Slade, daughter of a British admiral, to renounce a life of ease to devote herself to the service of Mahatma Gandhi, the attractive English girl revealed today.

Journeying to London with Gandhi to attend the round table conference, Miss Slade told how she had to come to shave her head, to wear coarse cotton garments and to spend every moment of her waking hours waiting upon the little man who is attempting to lead India's millions to freedom.

Her attraction to Gandhi, she declared, was purely a "religious one."

HAPPY AND PEACEFUL

"All religions are equally good," she said. "I do not change mine to join the Nationalist movement, because before adopting Gandhism I had no religious beliefs of my own.

"Now I am happy and peaceful in mind. Life is not hard. My inspiration carries me over any difficulties that present themselves."

The criticism of those who think it unusual for a cultured English girl to embrace Hinduism and become the servant of a "prophet" has not affected Miss Slade's enthusiasm for her calling, she said.

"I have not suffered from ostracism," she said. "This is the first time in six years that I have associated with Europeans, but I feel absolutely no desire to return.

SUPERIORITY COMPLEX

"The British," she continued, "are acceptable to India if they will treat Indians on equal terms, but they acquire a superiority complex.

"My brother-inlaw, really the most decent fellow, became autocratic through 15 years' association with the civil service in India. I visited him in Madras, and found he wasn't the least anxious to advertise his relationship with me."

Describing the home life of Gandhi and his intimate followers, Miss Slade declared that their existence was simple in the extreme.

"They eat the cheapest food," she said. "Medical attention is discouraged. Illness is treated by herbs, and has proved efficacious in ordinary cases. Very rarely is any other method used, save in surgical cases."

JUVENILE RADIO BITS

Studios Strive to Delight Kiddies

By N. F. T.

Following holiday offerings that proved quite satisfactory, the air waves still have sufficient variety in store with which to sustain a measure of lively listener interest through the remainder of the current week.

As a distinct novelty, arranged with meticulous care, comes a musical program tomorrow night at 8:30 through WEEI. Originating aboard the S. S. Majestic, moored at her berth in New York harbor, the concert consists mostly of selected international music. Songs from "H. M. S. Pinafore" are scheduled for revival, in addition to which brief informal remarks will be heard as representatives and consuls of various foreign nations are introduced. New England will hear this half hour period through WEEI.

Local features begin to sparkle to such a degree that they not only attract, but command attention over the area served by Hub stations.

HEARD THIS ONE?

For instance, the network key stations in New York could hardly put a 15-minute job on the air that would excell the show designed for kiddies (enjoyed by grown-ups, too) sent out by WBZ at 6:15 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings. The Mary Rocket hour they call it and of course it embraces fantastic situations encountered by a fictional radio character, Jolly John. Produced in Boston from start to finish and cast with studio talent hereabouts, the quarter hour show includes everything youngsters thoroughly enjoy. Best of all, it is proof positive of what can be done locally besides presenting crooners, tenors, ensembles and talks. Last night's broadcast in particular afforded genuine thrills for three attentive kiddies, where your Uncle N. F. T. happened to be visiting.

GRR! GRR! NICE DOGGIE

While on the subject of offerings especially created to capture juvenile ear cuppers, we cannot overlook "Bozo" the trained bulldog heard with Old Man Sunshine (Bob Pierce) through WEEI nightly at 6 and 11 p. m. It is a pleasure to meet "Bozo" because one really does meet him. Though his underslung countenance is quite menacing at first glance, the twinkle in his brown eyes reflects affection. This huge English bulldog barks acknowledgement of a newly made friend's pat on his massive head. Flashing the stroke, an average heart skips at least one beat. "Bozo" then extends a huge paw on command of his master (never until "the boss" indicates it is all right to do so) thus conveying his approval of the meeting by a hearty "handshake."

Here is a canine that should surely be on the stage. His radio performances are ample evidence of extraordinary intelligence. As for cordiality, he could give a few (steep few), Bob Goudreau's Boston announcers and studio folk some valuable lessons.

MAKING MORE FRIENDS

Beloved among little ones in New England, Bob (Big Brother) Emery keeps on creating mirth and entertainment of a high order. Incidentally, his Thursday night auditions at WNAC are consistently bringing new child "finds" into the radio limelight. Bob has a way with him that adequately accounts for his popularity, which is not confined alone to boys and girls.

* * *

So if ever the elaborate air presentations calculated to capture adult ears prove lacking in quality twirl that dial to one of these current broadcasts being aired for kiddies. It's great fun.

COMPANION AT PARTY SOUGHT AS STRANGLER

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—Jack Hartigan, 24, a truck driver, was sought by police today for questioning in the death of Miss Catherine Cronin, 20, an insurance office clerk, found strangled to death in the Greenwich Village apartment occupied by Hartigan, his mother and brother.

The body was found in the apartment yesterday morning by the brother, Pat Hartigan.

Police said they learned Miss Cronin's death occurred some time after a drinking party in the Hartigan apartment which wound up in a taxicab ride and a traffic accident.

Miss Cronin, her sister Blanche, 23, the Hartigan brothers and Fred De Javannenis, a taxicab driver, left the party early yesterday morning with Jack Hartigan driving the cab. The ride ended when the cab hit a fire hydrant in upper Manhattan.

Other members of the party told police that Jack Hartigan and Miss Catherine Cronin walked away from the scene of the accident.

Pat Hartigan said when he arrived home he found the girl's body. His brother was asleep. Pat said he awakened Jack and told him the girl was dead.

"She was dead when I brought her up here," Pat said his brother told him. He said Jack then put on his clothes and announced he was leaving town.

An autopsy established strangulation as the cause of death. There were no marks on the girl's throat, but Medical Examiner Charles Norris said a wide strip of cloth might have been used.

SCHOOLS OPEN IN 11 TOWNS

"Back to school week" opened today for most of the school children of towns near Boston, with re-openings of schools scheduled to continue almost daily through Sept. 15.

Schools opened today in Billerica, Harvard, Bolton, Carlisle, Acton, Maynard, Burlington, Canton, Cohasset, Hingham and Saugus.

The majority of the schools remain tomorrow, with Avon, Arlington, Bedford, Beverly, Braintree, Brockton, Chelsea, Concord, Danvers, Dedham, Easton, Everett, Holbrook, Hull, Lexington, Lincoln, Lynn, Lynnfield, Malden, Marblehead, Medford, Melrose, Milton, Nahant, Natic, Needham, Norwood, Peabody, Quincy, Reading, Salem, Sharon, Stoneham, Stoughton, Swampscott, Wakefield, Walpole, Waltham, Wellesley, Weston, Westwood, Weymouth, Wilmington, Winchester, Winthrop and Woburn.

The public schools of Boston, together with those of Somerville, are scheduled to open September 10, with Brookline, Cambridge, Newton, Randolph, Revere and Watertown on September 14. The town of Belmont opens the following day, September 15.

68 Keep Schools Closed

New Haven, Ct., Sept. 8 (AP)—Sixty-eight of Connecticut's 169 communities today had extended the summer vacation of the public schools from one to two weeks as a precautionary measure against infantile paralysis.

Taking a more cheerful view

As a result of twenty years' study of the angles of the Pyramids, a Swedish philosopher, Herr Arenius, now predicts the end of the world, this accident to happen in 1956. Since the world has weathered a considerable number of such predictions in the past, and unless Herr Arenius has acutely discovered secrets in angles to which other students of the Pyramids have been inexcusably obtuse, we expect that a goodly clientele of homes and business will still be cheerfully using clear, sparkling Boston ice at a time when Herr Arenius is gloomily selling his own refrigerator—if he has one—to a skeptic.

LAST PICNIC ERE SCHOOL OPENS

Nearly 50 children, boys and girls, left the Boston Industrial Home, 17 Davis st. today for Pleasant Park, Hamilton, for the last picnic of the season given by the home.

Former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, president of the institution, and Freeman O. Emerson, treasurer, attended the departure of the children.

Officials of the home stated that several thousand poor children of the crowded sections of the city have been given similar picnics during the summer, at the seashore and in the country.

The picnics are made possible through contributions to the fresh air fund of the home and are carried on every summer.

U. S. Drive Started to "Resell" Prohibition

Columbus, O., Sept. 8 (AP)—The Allied Forces of Prohibition, organized recently to strengthen dry sentiment, opened a nation-wide campaign here today. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, New York, is chairman.

After a three-day meeting, the campaigners will tour 260 cities for the purpose of "re-selling prohibition to the country" before the 1932 presidential campaign.

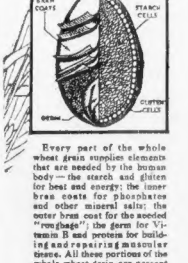
EVERY SHRED is 100% WHOLE WHEAT



Every part of the whole wheat grain supplies elements that are needed by the human body—the starch and gluten for heat and energy; the inner bran coats for phosphates and other mineral salts; the outer bran coat for the needed "roughage"; the germ for Vitamin B and protein for building and repairing muscular tissue. All these portions of the whole wheat grain are present in Shredded Wheat.

EAT the finest, fattest grains of wheat you can find—and you are receiving no more healthful nourishment than you get from Shredded Wheat. In fact, Shredded Wheat was invented so you could have natural whole wheat in tasty, digestible form.

Selected wheat is steam cooked, shredded and thoroughly baked—that's all there is to Shredded Wheat. All of the health giving properties of the original grain are retained. All the bran is there, all the carbohydrates, proteins and mineral salts—and the most important vitamins, too. Serve Shredded Wheat with milk and you have a complete, balanced food.

TRICKED DON IN FALSE START, WOOD ADMITS

Detroit, Sept. 8 (AP)—Gar Wood has admitted that he deliberately caused Kaye Don to get off to a bad start in the first heat of the Harmsworth trophy race on the Detroit River yesterday in order to give the British speedboat driver a handicap in the second heat.

Although Wood nearly had become the victim of his own scheme, he won the Miss America IX across the finish line more than one second ahead of Don in the Miss England II, after Don had taken the lead in the first heat.

Wood's confession came after he had been congratulated on his victory by Don.

"When they told me I couldn't have it," Wood said, "I made up my mind I would show Don a trick or two.

"I planned the start. I said I would be over that line first if I were a minute ahead of the gun, and, if Don wanted to follow me, that was his business. Everything went off just as we had planned."

Wood's Miss America II, which was [illegible] miles from the premature start, was started this morning.

THERE MUST BE A REASON WHY MORE MOTHERS BUY HOOD'S GRADE A MILK THAN ANY OTHER

HP HOOD & SONS MILK

THERE IS A REASON. Mothers have found that Hood's Grade A is always the same uniformly rich, clean, fine flavored milk. That babies and children like it. That they thrive on it. That it arrives promptly 365 days a year. That it is delivered by a courteous salesman, and that it relieves her absolutely of any care or concern about her milk supply.

She knows that back of these things there is an organization of milk specialists devoted to a single idea. Concentrated on a great, important public service. It brings to you a protection not even attempted by any official agency. It successfully performs a function impossible to the untrained, the ill equipped, and where lack of ideals exists.

These are reasons why more mothers and more doctors buy Hood's Grade A than any other sold.

The Hood country plants, where daily deliveries from the farmers are made, are models of cleanliness and orderliness. They are located in the pick of New England's dairying centers where New England's finest milk is produced.

"Tell a Vision" Reveals Fads and Foibles of Radio Advertising

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

Not even those patient midnight radio prowlers at home who have suffered from too much Adam's apple and kindred nonsense will be likely to draw comfort from Major White's elaborated satire in words and music known as "Tell a Vision" at the Majestic. There is one thing about your own radio set you may switch the dial. Even this may afford much relief when the high pressure boys go after your personal habits in cigarettes and soap, but it does provide an escape.

Popular Music

An experienced veteran in the broadcasting business was Major White, has attempted to skin alive; strip it bare and turn the nude carcass into an evening entertainment that would appeal to the lane that leads to burlesque. Popular, of not fancy, is the catch-word for entertainment that clutches all the way from any broadcasting station to the humblest variety theater that puts up its humora. And most of it is comical in its own simple way, even if in no way related to what goes out on the air.

If you are to believe what Major White presents in his radio fooling, broadcasting is a good deal of a hit or miss proposition; announcers are temperamental lads with an eye only for the main chance, while studios are the rendezvous of half wits, nit wits and ladies of the chorus who out freeky capers and seem to enjoy it. Just a measure of fun. There's plenty of hair-pulling, face-slapping in the piece, but, for example, it is good for a laugh at any hour of the day and here are the pure for all his companions. There are few clowns that excell him in slap-stick comedy or pantomime.

Loring Smith Stars

For richer feminine expression, Rosetta Duncan, one of the famous Topsy Sisters, struts and sings and dances. She even has a song with Mr Rarely in one of her numper called "Making a Play." In that spot, at least, she appears much at home. Another perspiring toiler is Vernon Wallace. He is chiefly secondary in plain parts of the show, but as you will observe, patient in waiting, wins in the end and he is not forsaken in the moment's when applause is order.

The real narrative of "Tell a Vision" is done by Loring Smith as Ma Lasnee. Every seasoned radio fan will spot him in an instant. For both he has high understanding, for his demands are more of burlesque than of caricature. However, Mr. Loring makes the best of a hard part and finally leaves you pretty well satisfied that things might have been worse.

One of these bright morn mornings someone is going to write and produce a one, sensible satire on the radio and its advertising. Maj White, who should have done this with "Tell a Vision," has consistently missed his own carefully selected objectives. All he has produced is a show with words and music.

Alpert in Boston Triumph

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Mickey Alpert and his orchestra top a sterling bill at the RKO Keith Boston this week. The All-Boston Alpertians got a great reception, so that the show turns out to be a triumph for them. Mickey's fling on the stage as a featured performer in the revue "Fattie Tales" bears fruit in his exhibition of showmanship in pulling across his numbers . . .

The jazz band's program has both value and variety, and proves more enjoyable than most of the polite orchestras heard before the feet get tired . . . Probably Mickey's musician-ship has a great deal of the attention, but his instrumentals of Mr. Rose and Mr. Agnew's songs with their own engaging Anapest, a point about which it is said that he is willing to let the spot light play on him in his accustomed place . . . Good music, good drama with lots of amusing comedy.

Paul Sloane has directed well the chief feature, acting honors go to Constance Cummings and Ralph Bunt. Frank Abatson comes out top-notch as performer. Frank Melford, Hugh Herbert, and Spencer Cox re-

Greta Grenstreet and Russell Hapton shown in a scene from "Street Scene" which comes to Loew's State Friday

Screen Epic at Fine Arts

The Fine Arts again screens a masterpiece. The picture is "Le Million" directed by Rene Clair and even better than his "Under the Roofs of Paris." Clair ranks with the world's greatest directors, and he has woven his cinematic offering into an almost perfect movie. As in "Sous les Toits de Paris," but in much higher vein M. Clair has again taken a simple tale this time one of a missing lottery ticket and by the music of a camera and the almost miraculous application of sound and movement created an epic comedy, a fantastic web, unheard, unreal no one picture that moves, that amazes in highest degree . . .

Big Show at the Howard

A burlesque show that is packed with most merit appears at the Old Howard bearing the title "Playing Around" by Columbia attraction. The show has plenty of zippo. Hap Fraver and Al Fennybutte merit Lorraine has a dance specialty that sparkles with grace and skill. Gabby Fields is a strutting beauty with ability and Fay Norman demonstrates that she has a voice of charm. Rose Rush is a clever miss who can sing and dance. Joe Lipman, juvenile, and J. J. Sullivan, the old stonist, give good support . . .

In addition to the burlesque the management offers a series of talking pictures. Films of the fight between Mickey Walker and Jack Sharkey are displayed. "Tony" Canzoneri in dance and musical revue was generous in praise. Lee Gregory, European broadcast vaudeo to be se-

Rail Drama Is Park Offering

The double feature bill at the Park is headed by "The Mystery Train," in which Marceline Day has the star role. It is a railroad mystery with Nick Stuart as the hero. The cast includes Noah Hopper and Bryant Washburn.

The second feature is "Flying Fools," starring Wallis Ray and Bonnie Glas, performers her famous feat of hurdling a full ed automobile in addition to Wales and Bonnie Gras, there appears Buzz Barton and sam Hardy . . .

John Boles Given Leading Role in "Cheating," New Fox Feature

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Universal Service Motion Picture Editor.

Los Angeles, Sept. 8—I was that surprised when I heard that John Boles had been seen on the Fox lot in conference with the big boss. John had business, big business. He was making a test for the part in "Cheating" Edmund Lowe left vacant when he took a leave of absence.

More than having a test made Mr. Boles signed a contract with Winfield Sheehan for the lead in "Cheating." That means he won't leave Hollywood immediately for his radio engagement. I shouldn't be surprised if he lingered here quite a spell, for so often a picture made as an outside studio helps re-establish a player.

Someone was discussing Eddie Dowling and his retirement from the fox lot. "He is tired," said his friend. "He hasn't had one time to himself since 1925, when he signed his first movie contract. Think it, Eddie has drawn a salary every week since 1923 and a big one." So I suspect money isn't enough. Any anxious heart, "Cheating" has what I "calls" a swell cast. Supporting Mr. Boles will be Linda Watkins, Greta Nissen, Hedda Hopper and Alan Dinehart.

Seen and Heard

The continued stay of Vivian Duncan and her small daughter in New York has given rise to a rumor that all is not well between the blonde Vivian and her Swedish husband, Nils Asther. The report that a separation is forthcoming has been whispered about for several weeks. However, neither Vivian nor Nils has made any announcement so we cannot be sure that the story that Nils has consulted a lawyer is true. Unfortunate for Constance Bennett and unfortunate for Gloria Swanson is the huge amount of money paid her for "Bought" has been so widely publicized. "Bought" is judged not on its merits but according to the money it cost. Connie, who is in the hospital, will only be laid up a short time if her wood luck and A hard year for the Bennett sisters. First Barbara was sick almost to death, then Joan had her hip broken and now Constance is undergoing another operation.

The continued report that Mary Pickford has retired from the screen is untrue. I had a long talk with Mary and she says she is coming back just as soon as she finds the right story and when conditions are less unsettled. She will never again make the "Daddy Long Legs" type of story. She wants a modern, sophisticated drama. "I couldn't retire now," Mary told me, "and leave 'Kid' as my last picture." Personally I'd like to see our Mary in a beautifully directed drama with a cast such as is given Norma Shearer.

LABOR AND POLITICS; DID GOMPERS TAKE THE BEST STAND

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ROBERT E. ROGERS

AS AN AFTERMATH OF LABOR DAY a few comparative quotations might be of interest. First from John W. Sullivan a 1895 address to the A. F. of L.

"We run the largest business enterprise on the American continent. This enterprise is to 'bull' our labor market. We succeed. We keep wages up right along, 25 per cent above the level they would be if employers had their way. In some cases we put them up 50 per cent. We thus retain for our own use half a million dollars which without our unions would go to enrich capitalists and monopolists. Twenty six million dollars a year! That's our joint dividend, no less.

"We retain this wealth justly because we produce it. We retain it because we have the power to do it. We are well organized, well disciplined, well led. We boast, therefore, in our chosen leaders the Greatest Captains of industry in this metropolitan center. Their equals in this community cannot be named."

That half million dollars of 1895 must be many millions now. Here is another, in milder strain, from Samuel Gompers

"The American Federation of Labor is guided by the history of the past. It draws lessons from history in order to interpret conditions which confront the working people so that it may work along the lines of least resistance to accomplish the best results in improving the conditions of the working men, women and children today, tomorrow and tomorrow's morrow, making each day a better day than the one which went before.

"This is the guiding principle, philosophy and aim of the labor movement. We do not set any particular standard, but work for the best possible conditions immediately obtainable for the workers. When they are obtained then we strive for better. The working people will not stop when any particular point is reached; they will never stop in their efforts to obtain a better life for themselves, for their wives, for their children, for all humanity. The object to attain is complete social justice."

Where Is Labor's Power

Both these statements, the somewhat rhetorical idealism of Gompers and the fighting realism of Sullivan, implied, of course, ally individualistic tactics, a constant fight against the employer within the capitalistic system. There was no thought of political action. Indeed, Gompers spent his life keeping the A. F. of L. out of political action. The result is that American labor has title more actual political power than it had 50 years ago.

Compare these statements, then, with the famous 1918 platform of the British Labor party. All of them, by the way, are quoted from John Hermann Randall's admirable book, "The Making of the Modern Mind" (Houghton and Mifflin). I abridge a little.

"The Labor party stands today for the universal application of the policy of the national minimum wage. Secondly, it demands the full and genuine adoption of the principle of democracy. The first condition of democracy is effective personal freedom. Hence the Labor party insists on democracy in industry as well as in government. It demands the progressive elimination from the control of industry of the private capitalist, individual or corporation; and the setting free of all who work, whether by hand or brain, for the service of the community and of the community only.

"What the Labor party looks to is a genuinely scientific organization of the nation's industry, no longer deflected by individual profiteering, on the basis of the common ownership of the means of production; the equitable sharing of the proceeds among all who participate in any capacity, and only among these, and the adoption, in particular services and occupations, of those systems and methods of administration and control that may be found in practice, best to promote, not profiteering, but the public interest.

Taxation on Equality Basis

"Thirdly, the Labor party stands for a revolution in national finance; for such a system of taxation as will yield all the necessary revenue to the government without encroaching on the prescribed National Minimum Standard of Life of any family whatsoever; without hampering production or discouraging any useful personal effort, and with the nearest approximation to equality of sacrifice.

"Finally, one main pillar of the house that the Labor party intends to build is the future appropriation of the surplus, not to the enlargement of any individual fortune, but to the common good. It is from this constantly arising surplus that will have to be found the new capital which the community from day to day needs for the perpetual improvement and increase of its various enterprises.

"From the same source must come the greatly increased public provision that the Labor party will insist on being made for scientific investigation and original research, in every branch of knowledge, not to say also for the promotion of music, literature and fine art, which have been under Capitalism so greatly neglected, and upon which, so the Labor party holds, any real development of civilization fundamentally depends.

"Although the purpose of the Labor party must, by the law of its being, remain for all time unchanged, its policy and its program will, we hope, undergo a perpetual development, as knowledge grows, and the phases of the social problems present themselves, in a continually finer adjustment of our measures to our needs. If Law is the mother of Freedom, Science, to the Labor party, must be the parent of Law."

Whatever one may think of either the advisability or the possibility of this program, there is no doubt that it has philosophical power and statesmanlike scope. It makes Mr. Sullivan's words seem brutal and elementary and Mr. Gompers' words vague and ineffective.

Today the British Labor party holds the balance of power in England. Working politically, it can make or break governments. It is not altogether certain yet that it will not beat MacDonald. Its progress toward power for the past 50 years has been enormous.

American labor has disdained the political weapon. It has relied on trades union tactics pure and simple. American labor may be very powerful, but that power is not showing itself in the present crisis. It looks almost as if it will have to do what our financiers and industrialists and chambers of commerce say it will have to do.

Would it be heresy to suggest that it might very well ponder upon British labor's program? That is, if American labor really believes in itself?

The artist of the dear old mauve decade who drew this picture probably didn't ascribe this state of chaos on Broadway to the fact that everyone wanted to get a glimpse of the Eugenie hats the two ladies in the foreground are wearing. It's a way they have, however, even in this Year of Sophistication, 1931, no less than in the days not long after the creator of the hats, the mad cap Eugenie, prepared for her wedding to Napoleon III. MY FATHER SAYS THERE'S NOTHIN' IN BACK OF NATURE, AN WHEN WE ALL DIE, THAT'S THE END
THERE'S THE SUN UP THERE -
IT'S A BIG BALL OF FIRE NOBODY PUTS COAL ON IT AN' NOBODY FEEDS IT OIL; IT AIN'T FED BY GASOLINE EITHER. IT JUST IS! IT GIVES US LIGHT AN' IT GIVES US HEAT, AN' IT DON'T ASK FOR NOTHIN' 'CAUSE WE AIN'T GOT ANYTHING TO GIVE IT. BUT SUPPOSIN' IT SHOULDN'T COME UP SOME MORNIN' AN' ANOTHER DAY PASSED AN' IT DIDN'T COME UP-
THEN WE FOUND OUT IT WAS JUST THAT VERY THING THAT KEPT US GOIN'. WITHOUT VEGETABLES AND GRASS, CATTLE'D DIE AN' WE WOULDN'T HAVE MEAT. WELL, ANYWAY, AS LONG AS WE HAVE TO HAVE A SUN, MAYBE YOUR FATHER COULD THINK UP SOME THING TO TAKE ITS PLACE. BUT IF HE DID, MIND YA, IT MUSTN'T COST NOTHIN'! But the bridle path which the sign blocked wound through the most attractive part of the park. And when a girl is beautiful, spoiled and the daughter of the mayor, she is likely to ignore signs. At once Marcia [illegible] ignoring them. The path wasn't closed to her.

She entered [illegible] horse full tilt to clear the [illegible] a man rail. [illegible] him coming from about [illegible] and dressed in a ski [illegible] no policeman could stop her.

She heard a drumming sound behind her. She turned her head. The black horse was coming and coming fast. Again [illegible] pulled, but Marcia didn't even try to hear what he was saying. She flicked her own horse with her riding crop. She would show him who's who!

The riding path [illegible] presently it and [illegible] into a park [illegible] valley floor. Marcia was [illegible] ten a second [illegible] wide and [illegible] horse [illegible] her. And she knew that by the time [illegible] there the pursuing horse would be hopelessly [illegible].

Only he was. When [illegible] Marcia turned her head for a quick glimpse [illegible] between the two horses had narrowed and the [illegible] was within [illegible] was small [illegible] time Marcia didn't [illegible] would show him.

Hit Her Horse
Marcia Urged Him On

This time there was no mere flick of the crop but a [illegible] cut which [illegible] her own horse. He [illegible] to the ground [illegible] whip. Marcia heard [illegible] She had one [illegible] and was [illegible] valley stream [illegible] about [illegible] nothing dance [illegible].

She turned [illegible] couldn't believe [illegible] horse was only a [illegible] behind her.

Her arm rose and fell [illegible] whip. It was [illegible] horse should be beaten. She heard the man calling to her again, but the [illegible] of [illegible] and the [illegible] drowned [illegible].

After that moment and [illegible] were racing [illegible] side and then it happened.

The horse [illegible] Marcia could feel [illegible] press again [illegible] Then [illegible] was [illegible] was happening [illegible] around her [illegible] long arms [illegible] for [illegible].

She was [illegible] from the [illegible].

The black [illegible] a [illegible] falling hair [illegible] Marcia [illegible] entire [illegible] and [illegible] in the arms of a rider.

She looked [illegible] one of the men who [illegible] holding her own [illegible] her own [illegible].

"How dare you!" she began.

The voice stopped her. A man still held her despite her struggles.

"Look," he said nodding ahead. Marcia turned and looked.

Her own horse [illegible] He had gone [illegible] on the [illegible] which the [illegible] feet ahead. [illegible] was [illegible] timbers [illegible] wide [illegible] hanging [illegible] had been [illegible] fore. No [illegible] eyes [illegible] upon it [illegible] and [illegible] sole [illegible] death—for [illegible] under.

Marcia Fainted
As Captain Seized Her

Marcia knew now [illegible] for the sign and [illegible] in not [illegible] the [illegible].

When she came [illegible] lying on the grass [illegible] the path while her [illegible] was being [illegible] her dropping water on her face from his [illegible] cap.

She blushed and sat up. Automatically her hands went to her disordered hair.

"Feel alright?" he asked.

For the first time Marcia looked [illegible] and [illegible].

"You—you're not a park policeman," she said.

He smiled. "No," he said. "But I did the best I could. I had been doing here yesterday and I knew what you were heading for. But you wouldn't stop when I called to you. May I introduce myself? I'm Captain Adamson—Robert Adamson. The only polo-playing Adamson in Central Africa and the Philippines—with the Marines. I'm on leave."

[illegible] If he hadn't caught her [illegible] I'm afraid you'll have to help me home," she said.

Marcia rides the black horse now. But she pays attention to signs. She has known the wife [illegible] Mr. [illegible]

Greedy Flames Snatch Lives of Three Small Children in Northboro Fire Tragedy

RUINS OF HOUSE OF DEATH

Blackened embers show how fiercely the flames swept the little home of the Ouimet family in Northboro today, taking the lives of three children and injuring a fourth. Only the baby, saved by the mother, escaped injury.

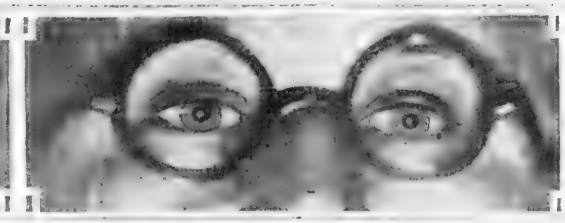
THE EYES OF HARRY POWERS—AND THEIR INTERESTING STORY

EYES THAT WOOED

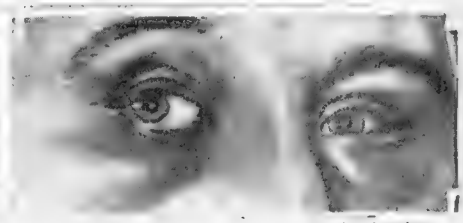
Eyes are the windows of the soul and these photographs of the eyes of Harry F. Powers, mail-order Romeo and confessed slayer of five, provide an interesting study. Here is how they looked out from a studio portrait which he mailed to "matrimonial" prospects—before his arrest.

EYES THAT FEARED



And now note the contrast. Powers has just been arrested and questioned. The secluded garage has been located, clothing of the missing Eicher family found—a trunk, a blood-stained mattress—there is sickening suspense as the police hunt grows "warmer." But no breakdown—no confession. The eyes of Harry Powers are forcing a strained unconcern as the net draws tighter—and not missing a thing.

EYES OF A MAN AT BAY



It isn't hard to follow the story now. Five bodies have been dug up. "Yes, I did it!" Powers has admitted. A confession has been signed. But, listen: "Any one who would commit such a crime is insane," he is saying—and the eyes watch the effect of his words.

SUICIDE TIP WINS PRIZE

HEARINGS FOR 2 IN GIRL CASE

Henry J. McCue and John J. O'Donnell, both of Woburn, serving sentences in State prison for attacking two young girls, will be granted parole hearings September 24, because of signed statements made by their alleged victims, it was announced today.

The men were committed March 12, 1931, for 15 to 20 years each, after being found guilty of criminal assaults on Helen V. Purcell, 18, of Allston and Helen T. McCarthy, 18, of Cambridge, at the Woburn-Winchester line.

WILL CALL GIRLS

Atty. Asa Fred C. Walton based his petitions for pardons for the men [illegible] and were accompanied by [illegible] that he was not [illegible] the girls were arrested in connection with the [illegible] Chairman Frank A. Brooks of the parole board said he would summon both girls to the parole hearing to take place in State Prison at 9:30 on Sept. 24.

According to records of the trial the girls were taken from the corner of Pleasant st. and Lexington ave., Woburn, by car to Scully sq. and driven to an abandoned building at the Woburn-Winchester line.

LIFER ASKS PARDON

A hearing will also be held September 17 on the petition of Cyril A. Sullivan, colored, of New Bedford, serving a life sentence as accessory before the fact to the murder of Joseph Thomas [illegible] New Bedford in 1916.

Three companions of Sullivan pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the trial and were sentenced to 8 to 10 years each. He pleaded not guilty and was given a life sentence, being committed June 22, 1917.

On Sept. 17 a hearing will be held on an indictment charging [illegible] with the murder of Sept. [illegible] Providence, using 36 months [illegible] years of $10 [illegible] from a finance corporation. Curley Calls for 5 Billion Federal Prosperity Loan [illegible] federal prosperity loan, as advocated by William Randolph Hearst, was made by Mayor Curley and labor leaders before 7000 members of the Boston Central Labor Union gathered at a mass meeting on Boston common in celebration of the 50th anniversary of Labor Day.

"The unemployment problem is age-old and must be considered and settled right if America is to endure, the mayor said. "William Randolph Hearst, with his great agencies for the distribution of information, has demanded an immediate session of Congress and the adoption of legislation providing for an expenditure of five billions of dollars for the benefit of the American nation."

"Oh," says the President. We will appoint another commission."

"TIME FOR CHANGE"

"During the war they fed the Belgians food. They have fed us on commissions during the past two years and are still attempting to feed us on commissions. It is time to change."

[illegible] address urged every citizen in Boston [illegible] attendant hardships. He said in part:

"The future of our country depends on the future of organized labor because organized labor is as inseparable a part of America and its future as are the branches of government, the executive, the legislative, and judicial, and a more potential good than all three combined, for the welfare of humanity the world over.

"How about other countries? What have they done? Holland, one of the smallest countries in the world, confronted with a similar situation, appropriated $500,000,000 for the reclamation of land, a part of the bed of the ocean, pumped in from the Zuider Zee. Three hundred million dollars with a population of less than 8,000,000.

"We have a population of 122,000,000 in America. If we expended in the same proportion as one capital project, such as Mr. Hearst suggests, for the development of highways, rivers, harbors and other developments of a national character we would expend $40,000,000.

"During the World War we did not hesitate at $40,000,000. We have an economic war here. It has been in progress for two years and nationally we have not spent a dollar up to date, to settle that economic warfare.

"Let Congress assemble and appropriate the $5,000,000,000 as [illegible] Old in Holland. Do as they are doing in Italy, where they are spending $450,000,000 so that no one will be out of employment during the coming winter."

MORIARTY FOR LOAN

[illegible] Arthur Moriarty, President of the Boston [illegible] in his address said:

"In this period of economic uncertainty and actual suffering when cowardice and hesitancy have prevailed among the financiers from whom we have the right to expect courage and confidence there have been two sensible plans presented one by William Randolph Hearst and the other by President Green. With these proposals the labor movement are in complete accord as are the other workers throughout the country.

Mr. Hearst urges the Government prosperity loan by the national government, for the development of highways, rivers, harbors, for the construction of public buildings and other public developments, which, growing counties, with confidence in itself, requires for its present needs and future necessities.

[illegible] president of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, said:

"Unemployed workers, with hungry mouths at home, are a fertile field for those who seek to destroy our present economic system. Yes, even our form of government. Labor does not seek charity. It does seek profitable employment."

SMALL HOMES and Small Incomes

7-PIECE DINETTE GROUP, $128

The buffet is 48 inches long, table has extension feature. There are besides, cabinet armchair and three side chairs seated in tapestry. A sensible design worked out in pleasingly grained walnut combined with gumwood.

THIS is one of innumerable values from our Fall display which we do not think can be equalled in Boston.

Our ability to purchase in volume and the prestige manufacturers gain by having their lines on our floors, gives us great leverage in securing low prices. The benefits go to our customers.

Small incomes find it particularly profitable to choose here because they get so much in value, in variety, in quality and in service. Even if you "only want to look," you are welcome.

GRAND HOTEL

—By VICKI BAUM—

THUS IT was that Flammchen found the two of them when she stole through the door to see where Preysing had got to. "What's the matter? Who were you talking to? Did you feel bad?" she asked, peering in the dim light to see what was going on.

Preysing made three attempts before he could reply.

"Something has happened," he whispered at last, in a voice no one in Fredersdorf would have recognized.

"Happened? Good heavens, what has happened" It's so dark in here," Flammenchen said and turned on the ceiling light. It cast a hard white radiance over the room.

"Oh . . ." was all Flammchen could say. She saw a little, pert waiting girl lying on her bed.

"He tried to shoot me. I only struck him a blow," he whispered. "Some one must call the police."

Flammchen bent down over the girl.

"His eyes are still open," she said in a low voice that sounded consoling.

Surely he's not dead. I liked him so, the last few impertinent times he's been in my hotel," she added to herself.

"Nothing must be touched before the police come," said Preysing, louder than he meant, and now alert. Then Flammchen understood at last what happened.

Oh . . . she said again as she fell back. Then everything began to run round and the walls closed in upon her.

She ran from the room, though there and down, pulled herself together from the top of a cupboard and ran on stumbling. She no doors, nothing but doors.

"Help!" she cried faintly. "Help!"

And the doors swayed before her eyes and a voice said: Don't cry. One was open. Flammchen saw it and rushed, she was no more.

Often there is such a noise in the house of the Grand Hotel that the visiting chaplain often has the same complaint will he compose a sermon and delivered. Anyone might need along to join in of course every night. Help! Help and no one can help.

Kringelein certainly, who will not sleep because he was on the quiet floor the sounds of renewed pains in his stomach, Kringelein almost suffering and the approach of death had made him stilled and acute of ear. Kringelein heard the row as Flammchen ran past his door, opened quickly, out of bed and opened the door.

The next moment Flammchen staggered towards him, fell against him, outstretched arms. Help! Help!

She had fainted, and she did a number of perfectly one-sided things. He put one arm under the limp body, the other under her knees and lifting her up with no effort he laid her on his bed. Then he knelt with dress on to the shoulder and drew a deep breath. The look of blood from his heart was overpowering. Kringelein looked around the room and found the bottle of Hindi. Buy. He sat and put a few drops on Flammchen's lips. A shudder passed over her forehead, but she was too unconscious to drink. But she was breathing deeply and at every breath the tips of her bright hair moved and now, again, as on the day with an indecisive movement, Kringelein ran into the bath and brought a wet sponge and a need water he carefully laid on her face and her temple. Then he felt for the pulse of one hand and found it. After two he stood by the bed and waited.

He did not know that his face had taken on an expression of the most passionate concern while he stood there, resting down upon her. He did not know that he smile was the smile of a boy of seventeen. Perhaps he did not even know that at this moment he felt at all, and utterly tired.

But this he did know, that the feeling which now penetrated him with an almost painful warmth of appeal in a hopeless and unreasonable way was unknown to him only in dream. He had never expected that such a feeling could be experienced in real life.

Flammchen fainted. Bit by bit she felt like a child waking up and first opened her eyes. She blinked, smiled, felt with a deep breath and whispered:

The next Kringelein picked up the quilt from the floor and spread it carefully over her. She was now conscious, but he found it difficult to put her thoughts in order.

How did I get here?" she asked. What are you doing here dearest? Flammchen said "dearest" and this gave him a shock of sweet surprise but as he was already in the midst of wonders he took it as a matter of course.

"You fainted and came to me," he said simply.

Now Flammchen recognized her surroundings. Everything came back to her and she sat straight up in bed.

Forgive me, she whispered. "But something so awful has happened.

She began to cry. At once Kringelein's eyes filled with tears too, and his lips, which still smiled, began to tremble.

Her tears came in a flood that smothered and appeased her. Kringelein looked on, and the pressure of his eyes smarted with the pain of his suppressed emotion. At last he put his hand on Flammchen's back. "There there there," he said. "There there."

Flammchen looked up at him with swimming eyes.

"Oh it's you," she murmured with ice of . Now at last she recognized in the strange figure at the bedside the little man who had danced and sung with her yesterday and who had been so courageous that day in his misery. Preysing. A confiding and pleased sense of security took hold of her.

"But we know each other," she said and snuggled up to his fingers with spontaneous gratitude. It never occurred to her to and collected his strength an unexpectedly large resource of strength and aggressiveness.

What has happened to you? Did Preysing do anything to you?" he asked.

"No no no," said Flammchen, "no to me."

Shall I call him to account? I'm not afraid of Herr Preysing"

"He has killed him," she whispered.

Killed" Who has killed whom?"

Kringelein's head was but he put Paula Flammchen and kept calm.

But to's impossible. I can't believe it" he whispered.

Dead" But he can't be was life itself. He was strength personified. How could a fellow like Preysing . . . Have they arrested him? How did you know about it" How did it happen?

IN ONE CORNER of Tony's room a whatnot loaded with dusty china knickknacks in the other a really lovely secretary . . . a bead curtain divided the room from another room. There was a small square piano, a scarf thrown over it. There were modern student lamps and one oil lamp, in red glass. There was a Rodgers group and a ladder-backed chair and a Morris chair and two pieces of mission furniture. It was a hodge podge of generations, all of them dusty. It had a strange odor, that room, dust, decay, disinfectant, rabbage boiling and genteel poverty. . It was incredibly depressing.

Tony, poor boy stood by her. You are lovelier than ever, he said softly.

Tony was no shock to her senses in his nearness. Her senses remembered dimly. But love, which had glossed through them was gone. That she experienced no revulsion was merely habit. Her senses might remember but her heart did not, nor yet her mind. She drew herself away gently.

"Please, Tony," she said

He placed a chair for her; sat down himself on an Empire sofa battered, the upholstery threadbare. He stared gravely.

"You no longer care for me?"

He had explained nothin as yet. But it was all easier than she had expected. She said honestly, openly

"No, Tony."

He spoke without accent but his gesture was South European A hand flung palm up, a shrug of the head conveyed more under the well fitting coat.

"I see. I had expected it. When—when you found out . . . about me?"

"I began," she said, trying to be honest, "I began to stop caring then. It—it was a shock to me. You don't know . . . But I have always supposed that all you did, all you tried to do. And for a little while—"

She hesitated and stopped and was amazed to find tears in her eyes. He finished her sentence for her

"For a little while we were happy. I am. I would have told you—before. But I was afraid. You see," he smiled ruefully, rather charmingly, "you see, I was in love with you, Fanchon."

She started a little at the use of her name. She had not heard it for so long. Tony's keen black eyes narrowed. He went on smoothly.

"And I wanted to marry you. But I was afraid to tell you . . . So I planned carefully to make it possible to turn my last trick, to marry you then and take you away somewhere and go straight in some place where we could live happily and no one would ever be the wiser, least of all you. But, I didn't turn the trick," he said

"No."

She looked at him. His even pallor, that of olive skin was perceptible. He had grown a little heavier. He looked a little gross. He was no longer clean shaven and wore a small mustache. Tony's shape was a certain lean hunger in his case. He was fleshed, replete. She began to be afraid. She shrank the least from her

"Tony, I have brought you your money—all of it," she said . . . and handed him the envelope.

He took it from her. He did not open it. He held it in his hand and regarded it. His face was expressionless. Presently he put it in a pocket.

"You do not need it?" he asked with a most extraordinary formal courtesy — extraordinary under the circumstances.

She shook her head

"Very well, then. I do. But it was not be enough. I may have one, much more besides. Not for myself alone. But for you also. So that we can both go away and start all over again . . . and you would help me."

She flushed. Her heart quickened a beat. She asked

"But how can I help you?"

He rose so abruptly that she was drawn into the sense of the word striking her.

As Mrs Carstairs piece a Evelyn Howard . . . is not he eyes?"

She cried out then clenching her hands on the fat flush arms of the chair

"But I am not her niece! I am not Evelyn Howard! You know that as well as I."

"Do not speak so loudly," he suggested. "I said we are alone. We are—for all practical purposes. But there are peep holes—listening stairs."

She said low, shaken

Tony, what are you thinking? What do you wish me to do? Tell me how you found me . . ."

For the first time the ruthlessness looked from behind his mask. A swarthy, big nose, set commonplace features, was the expression of something both wounded and frustrated

It was not hard Yet you covered your tracks well. You did not wish me to find you, Fanchon?

She answered, low.

"No. Perhaps not, Tony . . . I was hunted through the streets by the very newsboys calling out —Oh, you know what they called! I wanted to get away from it all. —to hide somewhere. I thought I might be found, taken back, questioned . . . forced to say what I knew of you."

NEWER PARIS FROCKS

Fashioned of Black Taffeta

—SKETCHED IN PARIS—

An ensemble from Phillippe et Gaston is sketched. The coat, of black taffeta, has a high rolling collar formed entirely of separate ermine skins placed closely side by side, but showing the separation between as the supple collar rolls. The same effect is found on the sleeves. A high waistline is suggested by a stitched piecing encircling the coat.

The dress also is of black taffeta. There is a yoke at both front and back of transparent net entirely covered with straw embroidery. The sash, tied in front, is cut in one piece with the back of the bodice. An unpressed circular fold is found at the center front of the skirt and a similar one in back.

Bay of Tadoussac,
The White Whales,
Up the Sagu

In Big Game Land,
Without a Rifle,
Now We Can Dream.

THE BIG SHE BEAR'S INVITE TO LUNCH

I've been North where the white whales play in the bay of Tadoussac,
I've smelt the pines of the North Country, felt the breath of the great ice push
I've seen La Verge in the pale moonlight on the crags of the Saguenay
I've felt the white water grip the keel, fished the pools where the big ones lie

I've met the strike of the muscalonge, seen the salmon a silvery leap
I've crept 'round headland to toe of rocks, where the brown seals bask and sleep
I've combed the ridges in search of bear, and her cubs and the big she one
I've watched fill bellies in berry patch in the light of the setting sun

I've heard the gray goose a trumpet call ringing down from a gray-ing sky
I've smelt wood smoke from our own campfire, broiling trout hooked with our own fly
I've watched bull moose in the lily pads standing watch as his cow fed and drank
I've seen the sun rise over the peaks and over the mountains sink.

I've listened in loon laugh over the lake, heard the owl hoot in the night,
I have smoked the pipe of pure content dreaming warm in the birch bog a light,
I've stalked the alders and bottom lands and the spots where the deer bed down,
I've felt the peace of the silences, far away from man-made town.

ESPANOL

Now I'm back once more mid the city's roar with a year in front to dream,
Of mountain blue and valley green, purple lake and purling stream,
In memory's caching place I've hid away things I've felt and heard and seen,
To banish the wood's blues when they come—you Been There know what I mean.

Perhaps we are glad of it. Killing for the pure love of killing never pleased us. It was different when we needed deer meat to eat or furs to keep us warm. This time we saw more game in a week than ever before in a month. Some mental telepathy seemed to tell the woods folk we were out to do no harm. They did not hesitate to show themselves. A big she bear dining with her cubs on the high bush berries even seemed to invite us to join in the repast

Heigho! And now we're home! Home in good old Boston, soon the hunting season opens in New England. Bill and Charlie and Ed and Frank soon will be going out after quail, partridge, pheasant, duck, rabbit, fox and deer. We have had our hunt. For a whole year, now, we can dream of the bigger game we left roaming alive and free in the wilds of the Saguenay.

B. C. GRIDMEN IN FIRST WORKOUT OF SEASON

FIVE OF 1931 TEAM BACK AT HEIGHTS

They're at it again at University Heights, Chestnut Hill, today, for more than 50 gridiron athletes are maltreating innocent pigskins as Coach Joe McKeney's Boston College squad opens the local college football season.

The Eagles are the first of the local teams to swing into action. Yet McKenney has scarce time to whip his practically green material into shape before the first game with the Catholic University, which is less than three weeks away.

The Maroon and Gold coaching staff will present two new figures. Bill Offenberger, former Boston High school star prior to his career at the Heights takes over the office of line coach which was vacated by John Tiny MacMannon last fall.

Chuck Darling, who is rated as one of the greatest backs in the history of the game at the Heights has been appointed Assistant Graduate Manager and may be drafted to assist McKenney and Bill Ormsby with the backfield.

Captain Kelley Fit for Action

Captain Joe Kelley will be present at the opening practice session.

Kelley underwent an operation for appendicitis last winter at the close of the season. But he has completely recovered and is counted upon as the nucleus of the new backfield, the making of which will be the main task facing McKenney.

Only four other regulars who started the last Holy Cross game are returning to college this fall. Bill Bennett and Emil Romanowski, a pair of husky tackles; Harry Downes, center, and Flavio Tosi, an end, are the only first stringers who are eligible to play.

B. U. Prospects Good; First Work Tomorrow

Hilary Mahaney starts his second year as Boston University's head coach, and his seventh as a member of the Terrier grid staff tomorrow afternoon when he assembles a squad of football aspirants at the Boston Arena and personally conducts them to the Terrier training camp at Weston.

The Boston University mentor is facing this season with more optimism than he has at any time since 1925. He has several outstanding veterans, and a promising freshman group from last year available.

The opener is against Williams at Williamstown, September 26. Wittmer, former Princeton star, has a great team this year, but the Terriers should have enough veteran strength to give the Little Threes Champions a stiff tussle.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

The speed which the swinging club attains in the forward swing results wholly from the leverage pressure exerting from your stiffened right leg and not at all from power and exertion you apply as a means of whipping or slashing the club. Even the leverage, as such, is not to be construed as a "pushing" process. On the contrary, it is a fulcrum action, as I have outlined heretofore. If you will understand it as such, and will let your club swing from off this fulcrum, or leverage, it will attain great velocity. Now if you particularly exert yourself, if you deliberately seek to make the club go, you merely slow it up. You have often been told this before; now we get at the reason. Pressure on your part against the club immediately destroys your fulcrum leverage. Suppose you had depressed a spring board, for a flying dive, and, just at the moment when your weight had depressed it to the maximum, the board gave way. Your dive would be a flop. Your fulcrum is your spring board for your golf swing.

Another Nuthall! Here is little Pat Nuthall, baby sister of Betty of British tennis fame, who came very close to winning the English junior title the other day. With two boys and two girls all court stars, England has a real tennis family. While Betty is most famous of the quartet, the others all are well known in England. (I. N. S.)

Diamond Dust

Still in sixth place despite losing two games to the Robins in Brooklyn on the holiday, our Braves conclude their series in a single game today.

Ed Brandt made another attempt to chalk up his 18th win of the season yesterday, but he was nosed out in the 10th inning, 5 to 4. After the Robins had got away to a four-run lead, the Braves tied the count in the fifth at the expense of Watson Clark. After that, neither hurler was scored on until the Tribal southpaw ace allowed a tally in the 10th.

In the nightcap, old Tom Zachary gave the Flatbush boys only two runs but that happened to be one more than they needed to win as Van Mungo, a 21-year-old rookie from Hartford, making his big league debut, blanked the Warriors with three hits.

The Braves retained their slim hold on sixth place thanks to the Giants who walloped the seventh-place Phillies twice.

The champion Cardinals maintained their seven-game lead over the McGrawmen by handing the Chicago Cubs a pair of setbacks. Paul Derringer blanked the Windy City crew to win his 17th game of the season in the opener and Burleigh Grimes hung up triumph No. 17 by capturing the nightcap, 8 to 3.

The defeats were the eighth and ninth in a row for the Cubs and knocked them below Brooklyn into fourth place.

The Yankees remained within a game and a half of the second-place Senators by walloping the world's champion Athletics twice. The McCarthymen won the opener 15 to 3 without making a home run and then produced five circuit wallops to take the second tilt, 9 to 4. Babe Ruth hit two to bring his total for the season for 40 and Lou Gehrig hit his 42d of the year.

THEVENOW LOST TO PIRATES

Pittsburgh, Sept. 8 (AP)—Having pounded on the door of the National League's first division, the Pittsburgh Pirates today find the threshold barred by misfortune.

Four games behind the fourth place Chicago Cubs, and with six consecutive wins, the Pirates must run out their schedule without the services of their star shortstop, Tommy Thevenow.

Tommy slid into the home plate in the sixth inning of yesterday morning's game against the Cincinnati Reds. When the dust blew away it was found Thevenow had two fractures of his left foot, an injury which will keep him out of the lineup the balance of the season.

Howdy Groskloss, sensational young infielder, who would have been the logical choice for Tommy's place in the emergency, also is on the injured list. He is nursing a sick knee, the result of an old Amherst football hurt.

In addition, Catcher Earl Grace is suffering from a severe case of influenza, leaving only Eddie Phillips to do the receiving.

The Daily Dozen

By M. T. McSWEENEY

A man biting a dog is no longer news. Men do that every day at Revere Beach.

But fans defending a referee . . . that's news. Especially when the fans are sober.

The other night, in Ottawa, a wrestler slugged the referee. The fans immediately rose up and wanted to lynch the matman. Of course, Canada is not a dry country. That may account for it.

Can you imagine Brooklyn fans rushing to the defense of an attacked umpire? We can, with the defenders carrying bottles. And giving them to the umpire . . . in pieces.

Bill McAuley, our soccer expert, says that soccer referees abroad are trained on steeplechase courses. They don't look for friendly fans . . . and have never seen them yet.

Inspiring a cricket match is the softest job. When things get too hot, no one knows, not even the players. And you can always call time out for tea.

Germans defeat French at Marne, headline. But it was only in a track meet. Proving that those who fight and run away, may live to run another day.

Francis Ouimet, national amateur golf champion, doesn't drink. English and Scotch golfers wonder why. The answer is that they never tasted our home-made gin.

One drink of local gin makes a man a champion, without the necessity of playing 72 holes. He doesn't even have to shout, Fore! One drink, and his round is completed.

Hack Wilson has been suspended by the Cubs. Hacks are going out of style, it seems.

The Cubs are going to try for a flag next year. And they are now looking for "waivers."

The Robins will sing again next spring. This year, they are just laying eggs.

U. S. BOAT FIRST AT DETROIT

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 8 (U.S.)—The United States pulls one waves once more, but it was a technicality that brought the distinction in the running of the second heat of the Harmsworth trophy over a 30-mile ideal mile course on the Detroit river.

Both the Miss America IX, piloted by Gar Wood of Detroit, and Miss England II, driven by Kaye Don, winner of the first heat last Saturday, were too previous in going over the starting line.

Each was disqualified, leaving the Miss America VIII, driven by George Wood, Gar's brother, to go over the route alone.

To cap the misfortune of disqualification, Miss England II overturned on the first lap, broke in two, and sank. Don and his mechanics escaped without injury.

More than 200,000 persons lined the shores to witness what was expected to be the last of the Harmsworth series.

With Miss England II and Miss America IX out of the event, Miss America VIII remained fit to run.

START SERIES OCTOBER 1

Chicago, Sept. 8 (INS)—The World Series will be started Thursday, October 1, Kenesaw M. Landis, baseball commissioner, had announced today.

The first game will be played either in St. Louis or New York, depending on which wins the National League pennant. If the Cardinals win, as seems most certain, the second game will be played Friday, October 2. Then the teams would journey and rest until the third, fourth and fifth games were played at Shibe Park, Philadelphia, October 5, 6 and 7.

If the Giants meet the Athletics, the schedule would be: First three games at New York, October 1, 2 and 3. Fourth and fifth games, Philadelphia, October 5 and 6. Sixth and seventh, at New York, Wednesday and Thursday, October 7 and 8.

SOX AND TRIBE MUST FIGHT TO TIE '30 MARK

BRAVES HANG ONTO SIXTH PLACE

By JOE CASHMAN

There'll be no more baseball hereabouts until Thursday.

It would be just as well if there were to be no more in Boston this season.

Nothing but second division competition is on tap from here on and local fans have already seen far more than enough of that for one campaign.

Up to the middle of last month there was considerable interest in the doings of the Red Sox and Braves, but all that has been killed by the showing of the two teams in the past three weeks and cannot be revived until another race starts.

It seemed likely on August 15 that each native club would finish with a much better mark than last season, but since that time the Sox have won only three games and the Braves but two and each will have to show a lot of improvement during the final three weeks to equal its 1930 performance.

Manager John Collins of the Sox has repeatedly predicted that his club would not lose 100 games and would not finish last. Since the team has to win but five of its remaining 20 games to escape losing 100 decisions, it ought to prove the pilot correct on that point.

The Sox may also escape the basement, being but two games back of the White Sox, but it is virtually certain that they won't catch either the Browns or Tigers, both of whom they had hoped to beat out.

Showing of Braves Disappointing

The Braves, while not in the cellar, have been equally disappointing.

They were in the running for a first-division berth most of the way and it didn't seem possible that they could finish worse than fifth. Today they are hanging on to sixth place, where they finished last year, by the narrowest of margins and the best they can hope to do is to escape dropping to seventh before the final whistle blows.

Detroit Tigers, in the cellar when last here but now in fifth place, will open the Western invasion of the Fens on Thursday. The Bengals will play three games in as many days. The White Sox will come Sunday for four single games which will probably decide the ownership of the basement.

Next will come the Indians for three scheduled games and two more which were rained out when the Sox were last in Cleveland. The Browns will close the local American League campaign in a three-game engagement.

"ONCE UPON A TIME"

TED RAY HARRY VARDON FRANCIS OUIMET

"Once upon a time" future golf kings will tell their children. "Francis Ouimet trounced Harry Vardon and Ted Ray of England to win the National open golf title and make golf one of the greatest U. S. sports." It was 'way back in 1913 when the above picture was taken just after Ouimet won world fame by defeating the great British pair. Golf, almost unknown, grew in leaps and bounds from that famous day.

MANGIN BEATS FRENCHMAN

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 8 (AP)—Gregory S. Mangin of Newark, sixth ranking player of the United States, went into the fourth round of the National Tennis tournament today with a quick victory over Andre Merlin of France, 6—3, 6—2, 6—1.

Mangin, who was not seeded among the American players, played a brilliant all-court game in subduing Merlin, one of France's rising young hopes.

Frederick J. Perry of England was the first of the tournament favorites to progress to the fourth round. He eliminated Herbert Bowman, husky New York player, 6—3, 7—5, 6—2.

Clifford Sutter, the New Orleans tennis machine, marched into the round of four with another decisive victory over Donald M. Frame of New York, 6—1, 6—4, 6—4.

Play continued to follow form as Frank Shields, Davis Cup star, turned back Bruce Barnes, Blonde Texan, 6—3, 6—3.

Defeat of Britons Won Ouimet Fame

11th and the gallery began to troll to the clubhouse, figuring that Francis was all washed up and that Ray and Vardon would play off for the title.

Told He Must Beat Par to Tie Britons

Francis came up with a nice four at the 12th, the present 9th, and as he walked over to the old 10th tee he was informed that he needed to play the remaining holes in two under par to catch the Britons.

Apparently, he was stimulated by this information for he opened up with a birdie at the 13th and then got his par 5 at the long 14th, but his drive off the 15th tee left him a hanging lie, from which he pushed his second to the rough beyond the traps, which guarded the green.

"It's all over now," was the comment from the gallery, which had increased in numbers, since the report drifted back to the clubhouse that Francis had a chance.

But, again, his steady nerve and absolute confidence carried him through, for he played a beautiful niblick to within a yard of the cup and then dropped the putt for his four.

The gallery was in the wildest pitch of excitement but the most sensational shots were yet to come.

Hope Fell as Putt Stopped Short

At the short 16th, Francis ironed his way to almost the back of the green, which was not too bad until he stepped up to his approach putt and was eight feet short.

Another groan came from the gallery for eight footers are tough to drop under ordinary conditions and particularly difficult on a wet, slippery green in the final round of a U. S. open championship.

The applause that broke loose when Francis dropped that putt must have been heard in town but still the chances of the young star catching the Englishmen were anything but promising for Francis needed a birdie and a par to get his 304.

Although he had a fine drive at the 17th, his second shot called for care and perfect stroking if he was to get home and with nothing distance of the cup. His iron to the 17th green left him fifteen feet from the cup and again the gallery held its breath and prayed.

Jerome D. Travers, the national amateur champion, remarked "He's a fine putter. Won't there be a yell if he holes it," and there was, for Francis, on the green where he had spent hours practicing, was equal to the occasion and canned the much needed birdie.

Four on Final Hole Gave Ouimet Tie

Still, he had to get his four at the home hole and after a fine drive, he played a long iron which hit the embankment, which rose up the green and bounced back at his feet. The slightest more or less and Francis might have won the title without a play off, for he would have been home and putting for another three.

After carefully studying the line of his approach, Francis chipped to within four feet of the cup. As he was looking over the most important putt he has ever sighted, the gallery, which completely surrounded the green stood breathless for many two four and yard putts had been missed that day on that green.

After satisfying himself as to the line, Francis stepped up and with a firm stroke rolled his ball into the cup for a total of 304.

Just as the ball disappeared into the cup, there was a mad rush for the former caddy, who was hoisted on the shoulders of his admirers and paraded around the area adjoining the clubhouse.

What happened in the playoff the next day is history. Francis shot a 72, which gave him a five-stroke advantage over Harry Vardon, who was one stroke better than Ted Ray.

Francis has been in some tight situations since his first bid for fame at The Country Club, in 1913, but never did he have a tougher task than when he stepped up to sink that four-footer at the 72d hole of the 1913 open.

Another article on Francis Ouimet will appear in these pages tomorrow.

SHARKEY RATED AMERICA'S BEST

New York, Sept. 8 (INS)—The New York State Athletic Commission decided at its meeting today to recognize Jack Sharkey of Boston as the "heavyweight champion of America" and ruled that Sharkey's match with Primo Carnera in Brooklyn on October 2 would be for the "American heavyweight title."

This latter step was taken at the request of Leon See, Carnera's manager, and Jimmy Johnston, who will promote the Sharkey-Carnera-fight.

In making these decisions, the commission disregarded Max Schmeling, world's champion, who is under suspension here, and Mickey Walker, the former middleweight champion, who held Sharkey to a draw here in July.

Immediately after the meeting, Johnston told newspapermen he had closed with Jack Dempsey, former champion, to meet the winner of the Sharkey-Carnera bout. The Dempsey fight would be held here next spring.

Johnston said that last night he made a long-distance phone call to Reno, Nev., where Dempsey was fighting on his comeback tour, and that the old champion promised him the match.

Boston Women Beaten in Philly

Philadelphia, Sept. 8 (AP)—Margaret Carspecken, Morgantown, W. Va., and Arlene Kruse, Akron, O., were early winners today in the second round of the women's middle states tennis championship at the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Miss Carspecken put out Mrs. John F. Gardiner, of Philadelphia, 6—3, 6—2, to reach the third round, and Miss Kruse won from Elizabeth Packer, Boston, 6—2, 6—0.

Jess Haines Will Be Out Two Weeks

St. Louis, Sept. 8 (INS)—Jess Haines, veteran right-handed pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, will not pitch for the National League champions for two weeks, at least, Dr. Robert Hyland, club physician announced today.

Dr. Hyland examined Haines' right shoulder today and found he has suffered torn ligaments in his right shoulder, and will not be able to pitch again for at least two weeks.

SCHAAF TO TRY TO KNOCK OUT ROBERTI

By JACK CONWAY

Ernie Schaaf's thunderous right-hand punch will try to bring Roberto Roberti down when they clash in a 10-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at the Arena on Thursday night.

Schaaf has stopped his last seven opponents, Victorio Campollo, Argentine heanpole, was his last victim. Schaaf looks like the most destructive fighting machine in the country today.

Roberti's greatest effort here was against Monte Munn at Mechanics Building. Munn knocked Roberti through the ropes, but the latter came back fighting. He eventually won by a knockout.

In his last appearance in this city Roberti and Jose Santa engaged in a torrid mixup at the Arena. A close decision went to Santa.

Roberti is a big, powerful fellow. He stands six feet four inches in height and weighs 230 pounds. He should be able to match strength with Schaaf.

Schaaf Believes in Keeping Busy in Ring

Schaaf believes in keeping busy in the ring. He has been boxing on an average of once every three weeks. As a result, he is always in the best of condition.

In the event he wins from Roberti, Schaaf will probably battle Tuffy Griffiths in Chicago. He will later take on Charley Retzlaff in New York.

Ernie is the most talked of young heavyweight in the world. His amazing hitting power has rendered him to batter his way to the fistic heights.

Canzoneri and Berg in Title Bout

Tony Canzoneri will defend his title as world's lightweight champion against Jackie Berg at the Polo Grounds, New York on Thursday night. I saw Berg win a decision over Canzoneri at the New York Garden at the time Al Singer was boss of the lightweight division. Canzoneri is expected to reverse the tables Thursday night.

POWELL WINS AUTO RACE

Archie Powell from Des Moines, Iowa, hurled his Hispano-Suiza to a clean cut victory in the 25-mile sweepstakes, feature event of the Rockingham auto races yesterday afternoon.

Jumping into the lead on the treacherous dirt track, Powell maintained a steady pace for the entire route and his car crossed the finish line a winner, a quarter of a mile ahead of Burt Karnatz of Detroit.

Karnatz was piloting a Miller special. For 22 miles he gave Powell a hard time of it when a stone broke a lens in his goggles, opening a cut over his eye.

The blood blinded Karnatz. He was not forced to quit but had he avoided the mishap, he might have copped first honors from Powell.

Ralph DePalma took third, a mile behind the leader. The veteran Italian speedster was up with the forerunners for most of the distance but his supercharger failed him.

Fourth place went to Milton Marion and fifth to George Howie. But five of 22 qualifiers finished the race.

Powell's time was 23 minutes, 11 2-5 seconds.

One occured in the 20-mile race for amateurs with semi-stock models. Ernest Poole's roadster overturned almost in front of the grandstand and the crowd looked on in horror. But Poole, a Waltham entry, managed to jump clear of the tumbling auto and an examination disclosed nothing more than slight bruises.

SMILES AT CHALLENGE OF DEATH

Zip Laranice, of Chicago, who narrowly missed death when his car overturned in a race at the Rockingham track, is shown laughing at the challenge of the Grim Reaper. Poole's car was wrecked by the spill. "But it's all in fun," his grin seems to say.

The Home-coming

The sailors trample on him, rip at his uniform. "A lieutenant!" one reckons a woman's voice. "Kick him to death, the dirty bloodhound!" Before I can come to his assistance I get a blow in the face that makes me stagger. . . with all my weight I plant my boots in my assailant's stomach. Immediately three others fall on me and drag me down. "Lights out, knives out," cries the woman.

First Night at Home

Stealthily I glance at the clock. I have only been here a couple of hours, yet it feels like a couple of weeks since I last saw Willy and Ludwig. At last I get up and fetch my greatcoat.

"Aren't you going to stay with us this evening?" asks my mother.

"I have to go and report myself yet," I lie. I have not the heart to tell her the truth.

She comes with me to the stairs. "Wait a moment," she says. "It is very dark. I'll bring a light."

I stop in surprise. A light! For those few steps! Long, and through how many shell holes, along how many gloomy duckboard walks have I had to grope my way at night all those years without a light and under fire?

What Are We Fit For?

The smoke of pipes and cigars. Desires, thoughts, and feelings in seething confusion. God only knows what will come of them. A hundred young soldiers, eighteen lieutenants, thirty warrant officers and non-coms, all sitting here, wanting to start to live. Any man of them could take a company under fire across No Man's Land with hardly a casualty. There is not one who would hesitate for an instant to do the right thing when the cry "They are coming!" was yelled down into his dugout. Every man has been tempered through countless, pitiless days; a man is a complete soldier, no more and no less. But for peace? Are we suitable? Are we fit now for anything but soldiering?

AUTO RATE PROTEST

GOVERNOR JOSEPH B. ELY,
STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, MASS.

Gov. Ely

I hereby enter my protest against the proposed increase in compulsory automobile insurance rates, as announced by Commissioner Brown. I believe these rates are unfair and needlessly high and as a citizen of the Commonwealth I demand a fair revision downward and that my protest be listed at the hearing Sept. 11.

Bank Life Insurance

It Has Proved Successful

The extraordinary growth of savings bank life insurance, existent only in Massachusetts, is one of the marvels in these mottled economic days.

This system, which permits savings banks to transact insurance, was established here in order that the public might not be compelled to rely entirely upon the private insurance companies.

It was inaugurated twenty-four years ago, with one bank, which issued 282 policies the first year for which the insured paid premiums amounting only to $568.21.

Today there are twenty banks, with 110 agency banks transacting the business.

There are in excess of 98,000 policies, representing an insurance value of $88,000,000, with annual premiums amounting to $2,644,000 and with some $1,400,000 paid annually to the policyholders in the form of dividends, death claims and matured endowments.

It is not enough to say that this Massachusetts system, open only to residents of Massachusetts, supplies the cheapest insurance in the world.

The system was formed to protect the interests of the rank and file of people in the average walks of life and this it has done. Lapsed policies—the severe penalty paid by unfortunate men and women unable to meet their premiums when due—have practically been eliminated. For, under this system, there is a cash surrender value, a paid-up policy or some form of extended insurance after premiums have been paid the first six months.

The Boston Evening American is glad to record the success of this system because the Boston Evening American in company with Justice Brandeis and other fine public-spirited citizens had a substantial hand in its creation.

Prohibition, Homes

Dr. William E. Gardner in a recent sermon at Trinity Church said the decadence of family life presents a crisis more important than unemployment.

Today we are born in hospitals. We entertain in clubs and cabarets. We dine in restaurants. We close it all by being buried from funeral parlors.

Another preacher said recently that the modern home is merely the filling station and garage, a temporary place to park and fill up at breakfast.

However, a nation that has established for itself the highest living standards in the history of the world and that has increased its longevity rate some five years to every generation can hardly be said to have gone to pot.

What these preachers do not say is that the heavy proportion of crime, immorality and licentiousness has been produced out of prohibition, directly and indirectly.

When that evil cause is eliminated, when the bootlegger and hijacker and bandit are deprived of their lucrative revenue and when decent men and women do not have to sneak into shady places to satisfy a natural appetite there will be less cause to attack "the decadence" of modern family life.

Just Folks

The Whippoorwill

For two long hours I hear your shrill,
Loud, constant calling "Whippoorwill,"
And wonder, curious evening bird,
By what strange impulse you are stirred
That when the pale moon floods the sky,
You startle humans with your cry.
I cannot quite make out the call.
Is it from fear the moon may fall
Upon you as it floats above?
Is it a cry to those you love
Lured by the silver beams to stray
In other groves of trees to play?
What is your secret pain or thrill,
Gray bird, self-named the "Whippoorwill?"
Is it from duty or delight
You voice that constant call at night?
And are you in that manner queer,
Serving some useful purpose here?
Strange bird! The wisest man in vain
Attempts your mystery to explain.
We know not why your life was planned.
Your call we cannot understand
And God must smile to see us still Confounded by a Whippoorwill.

New York Day by Day

Drama in Every Block

NEW YORK, Sept 8—Economic adjustments have wrought strange shifts to the New York picture. In almost every block spouts a fluid little drama of pathos and often comedy. The superintendent of an exclusive apartment house in East 63d st. was, a year ago, an occupant of the finest suite.

Today he and his wife live in the basement. Four hotels on the fashionable East Side have night clerks who were formerly high-paying patrons. At first there was an inclination among those whose fortunes faded to hide from those who knew them in affluence.

But gradually there were so many in the same boat that pride was tossed aside. It is not unusual for a restaurant customer—it has happened twice to me—to recognize the waiter serving him as someone he has known when holding down a far superior job.

Henry Sell was recently the victim of an experience that illustrates the twirling of fate. He motored to a resort in Westchester with friends for dinner. The starter who handed him his carriage check looked vaguely familiar and he looked again.

Recognizing him as an old acquaintance who had held a responsible position the last time he saw him, Sell suspected a practical joke. With an effort at mock gravity he fished out a coin, expecting the incident to wind up in a laugh and mutual back slapping.

Instead the man backed away abashed and said: "Not that, please, Henry. It is humiliating enough." Then walked stiffly away. Puzzled, Sell sought the proprietor and learned the fellow, under an assumed name, had sought the job and had been filling it capably for three weeks.

For many on Broadway, the business halt merely brought relaxation—a brief respite in inconclusive fair weather lives. Yet to as many others it proved a noble test of courage. A lady who handed me change in a drug store the other day had her name in months ago blazing in these lights four blocks away.

Yet there are vivid splashes here and there to the shadowy travail all of us have been experiencing. A young man with a wife and three children, suddenly out in a newspaper merger, rented an office with $60 of his last $90 weekly salary. He angled for radio and talkie possibilities, landing jobs on a 10 per cent basis during the life of the contracts. His clients were those who had never thought of such work before. The young man's income is $125 a week and mounting, which proves it sometimes pays to be kicked out of a job.

My knowledge of furniture was strictly Grand Rapids until the recent experience of outfitting the New York apartment. Discussions of the Jacobean, the William and Mary periods, the Queen Anne and Louis XIV sent me in search of the family album or to give the radio dial a twist. Chippendale, the Adam brothers, Sheraton and Hepplewhite were just a lot of old fogey putterers. But today when furniture pops up as a topic I sit saucer-eyed on the edge of a chair, agog. Furniture is still just a lot of wood to me, but reading catalogs has made me curious. I'm even enjoying Hergesheimer's antique articles and Jimmy Durante's "Wood, Wood, Wood" is my favorite tune.

In fact, I believe much of our highbrow patter is an offshoot of "catalog culture" and not ponderous text-books. Even in my limited scattering, I have frequently heard exact quotations lifted boldly from catalogs I have perused. Furthermore, I have the confession of a welcome bachelor to every dinner table that his gallant observations on art are the sole result of studying the catalogs from the galleries. He has not even visited the Metropolitan Art Museum.

Then then are bookish souls who prattle of vellum, morocco, crushed levant, doublures of marbled calf, silk fly leaves and gilt tops. There is the story of one of them telling of his "Astral Edition" of Wilde in floriated gilt backs and fly leaves in white moire. "Some day," mumbled a stew, "I'm going to put on my lace underwear, squirt myself all up with perfume and borrow it."

* * *

From Variety: "When O. O. McIntyre went back stage to call, a bevy of beauties rushed at him."

It's that way wherever I go, since Vallee's married.

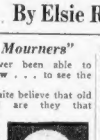
Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"Blessed Mourners"

I HAVE never been able to understand sorrow . . . to see the need for it.

Nor could I quite believe that old saying—"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted." Maybe they would be, at some future date, but what was the good of all this suffering now? Couldn't we be as wise and strong without sorrow? Couldn't we do even more good in the world if our hearts were not broken?



Elsie Robinson

Familiar questions, aren't they? You've asked them, too. The other day I came across something that may be the answer.

It was just a news item about Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York. It said that he had once more given a pint of blood to be used in making a serum to fight infantile paralysis.

When he was already a grown man, this sickness came upon Franklin Roosevelt. It must have been a frightful thing to him, even a more frightful thing, perhaps, than it would have been to a little child. For there he was in the full strength and pride of his maturity—cut down by the creeping horror. Terrible thoughts he must have had as he lay there on that bed and you can see that the memory of it never left him. He can understand, as another man wouldn't, what that disease means.

Suffering put that understanding into his mind. Suffering put something into his blood, too. For the blood of the man who has recovered from infantile paralysis isn't like the blood of untouched me. It has been changed and modified . . . It holds a healing power over the thing which ravaged it. If it can be used, in a serum, at an early stage of the disease, the patient may recover.

Queer—isn't it?—to think of pain doing a thing like that to a man's blood. Putting it through hell first and then, as a sort of blessed and priceless recompense, giving it the power to heal others who are in the grip of that same pain.

I sat thinking after I read that news item, thinking how fine it is of Governor Roosevelt to give his blood again and again as he does, making a blessing out of his own adversity. Thinking, too, with an ache in my heart, of the agony and terror of the mothers who must watch their own childr... die.

And my own agony and terror, that I can never forget, came back to me. And a wave of the old bitterness—

Then, quietly, as though here was the answer I had long sought, there came another thought . . . WAS THIS THE REASON FOR SORROW?

Was sorrow a sort of hell that one went through to give one understanding? A sort of disease that one endured, to give one the power to heal and comfort other sorrow?

Then that was what the old verse meant—"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted."

It didn't merely mean that your tears would be wiped away. It didn't mean that you would forget the pain. It meant that you would be given a new, proud something that made all the pain worth while . . . THE POWER TO HEAL.

THE POWER TO GIVE HEALING OUT OF A STRICKEN HEART, AS FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT GIVES HEALING OUT OF HIS STRICKEN BODY.

The Supremacy of Custom

By BRAND WHITLOCK

(From "The Little Green Shutter," by Brand Whitlock. Published by D. Appleton & Co.)

(Copyright, 1931, Brand Whitlock.)

A NOTABLE example of the authority and supremacy of custom was afforded in England nearly a century ago.

There the law provided that a convicted murderer should be hanged and then drawn and quartered.

But with the growth of culture and refinement and the more humane sentiment they produce, the senseless barbarity of this penalty, or at least of the latter part of it, became apparent, and the practice fell into disuse. The provision remained unchanged on the statute books, but murderers, though they were still hanged, were no longer drawn and quartered.

PUBLIC OPINION HAD COMPLETELY ABOLISHED THE PRACTICE YEARS BEFORE THE STATUTE WAS CHANGED TO CONFORM TO THE NEW CUSTOM.

We have recently seen this same principle at work in Michigan.

The Legislature of that State had enacted a statute punishing with imprisonment for life anyone convicted of an offense four times. The statute was intended to apply to habitual criminals, and under it a woman who had already been thrice convicted of violating the prohibition statutes was convicted of a fourth offense and sent to prison for life. She had sold a pint of whiskey to buy food for her children.

But the people of Michigan were too enlightened and humane to imprison a woman for life merely because she had sold a pint of whiskey. That sort of severity was not customary in Michigan.

No jury could have been found to convict offenders if such a dreadful penalty were to be attached to their verdict.

And so the Legislature found that they had been mistaken and amended the act by adding a provision that it should no longer apply to violation of the prohibition statutes.

For years and years the large cities had seen this principle at work. Influenced by the rural or provincial antipathy to the cities, and the distrust or dislike of the tastes, habits, and dress that are supposed to prevail in cities or among the well-to-do, whose habits are looked upon either as vain or vicious, the State Legislatures enacted sumptuary laws, but, though the effort was made over and over again, and innumerable crusades were undertaken, these Blue Laws were never enforced, and any municipal administration that seriously tried to enforce them was promptly ousted by the people at the next election.

There are striking examples of the principle at work on a national scale, as in the case of the Fugitive Slave Law, which the old Abolitionists FLOUTED, and the Sedition Act, which Jefferson when President REFUSED TO EXECUTE, because he "considered that law to be a nullity, as absolute and palpable as if Congress had ordered us to fall down and worship a golden image."

But the most striking example occurred in recent times, right under our very noses, and it seems to have taught us nothing, so difficult is it to learn from experience, even our own.

That example is to be found in the fate of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution. They were adopted during the period of reconstruction immediately following the Civil War, when the Abolitionists in their fanatical zeal were determined to force the Southerners to bow to their prejudices and to accept the Negro as a man and brother.

The amendments directed and empowered Congress to enact legislation that would place the Negro on a basis of absolute equality with the whites.

They were to be discriminated against in no way whatever.

In spite of all that Congress could do, however, the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments COULD NOT BE MADE EFFECTIVE; Negroes were not allowed to vote in the South except at the point of the bayonets of federal troops.

President Hayes was the candidate of the party responsible for the whole deplorable policy of reconstruction, and for the adoption of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments, and his oath of office bound him to enforce those amendments. But he had not been in the White House very long before he realized that it was impossible to enforce these constitutional provisions.

Some of the extremists, of course, protested and made a great clamor, and talked about reverence for the Constitution and the law and nullification and all that, and proposed force bills, and delivered fiery speeches to their constituents in the Middle West, where there were very few Negroes and hence no objection to their voting because, in the first place, they voted right and, in the second place, they were so few in number that their votes could not affect the result of the election.

But the force bills were NEVER ENFORCED, and the fourteenth and fifteen amendments, so far as securing equal rights for the Negroes is concerned, became wholly ineffective.

Even the chief section of the fourteenth amendment, that which provided that any Southern State that might restrict the right of suffrage, should have its representation in Congress proportionally diminished, is an ABSOLUTE DEAD LETTER; and no effort is made to carry it into effect though several of the Southern States, by various legal ruses, have established qualifications that restrict the right of the Negro to vote.

That is, the reconstructionist found out that their two constitutional amendments and all the statutes designed to give them force and effect were not law, and they were not law BECAUSE THE PEOPLE WOULD NOT BACK THEM UP.

For that is what a law is in a democracy, a statute that the people will back up; indeed, in the long run, that is all a law is anywhere.

The laws of a nation or of a community are the recorded customs of the people of that nation or that community, and all the historic codes—the Mosaic code, the laws of Solon and Lycurgus, the codes of Justinian and Napoleon, the civil law, the English common law, and the legendary taboos of savage tribes—are but customs that have existed so long that they have crystallized into law.

It is not the law that makes the custom, but the custom that makes the law, and when statutes run counter to custom they are impotent, and have no more life or vigor or reality than Novial, Volapuk or Esperanto or any other of the new international languages the enthusiasts have invented and tried to put in practice.

The sixth article in this series, based on "The Little Green Shutter," by Brand Whitlock, will appear Thursday, September 10.
